About this volume

English Animated A1.2 • Getting Around — an intercity train line, Canada.

This volume contains 10 of 10 units, written in full: every text, every task, every figure drawn. Units are 20 pages each at B-level and 22 at A-level, which is the extent specified in the series plan.

A1.2 • Unit 1 • Nine Days In

pages 6–27 • 22 pp • ~9 hours

Part 0 • The Big Picture ♦ A • THE WORLD

{width=6.

6in}

Four cars, ten past two in the morning — Fourteen things to find. One berth has a bag in it and nobody in it.

What happened at work yesterday?

By the end of this unit you can tell somebody what happened, in order.

◆ A • THE WORLD

A train crossing a continent, where nobody on board can go home at the end of a shift

◆ B • THE SYSTEM

the past simple of irregular verbs · 22 words for work on a train · the words that put a story in order · the vowel that changes inside an irregular verb

◆ C • THE PERFORMANCE

You tell the story of one shift that went wrong, in sixty seconds

0A • Find it — fourteen things

Find these in the picture. Write the number.

☐ a passenger ☐ a seat ☐ a ticket ☐ a window ☐ a bag ☐ a door ☐ a table ☐ a light ☐ a kitchen ☐ a clock ☐ a bed ☐ a corridor ☐ a cup ☐ a notebook

Three of these words are not in the picture. Which three?

the crew · a delay · a report

0B • Guess it

Look at the person doing paperwork at two in the morning. Why is he not asleep? Say one thing. You can use these words:

work · late · busy · problem · write

0C • Say it

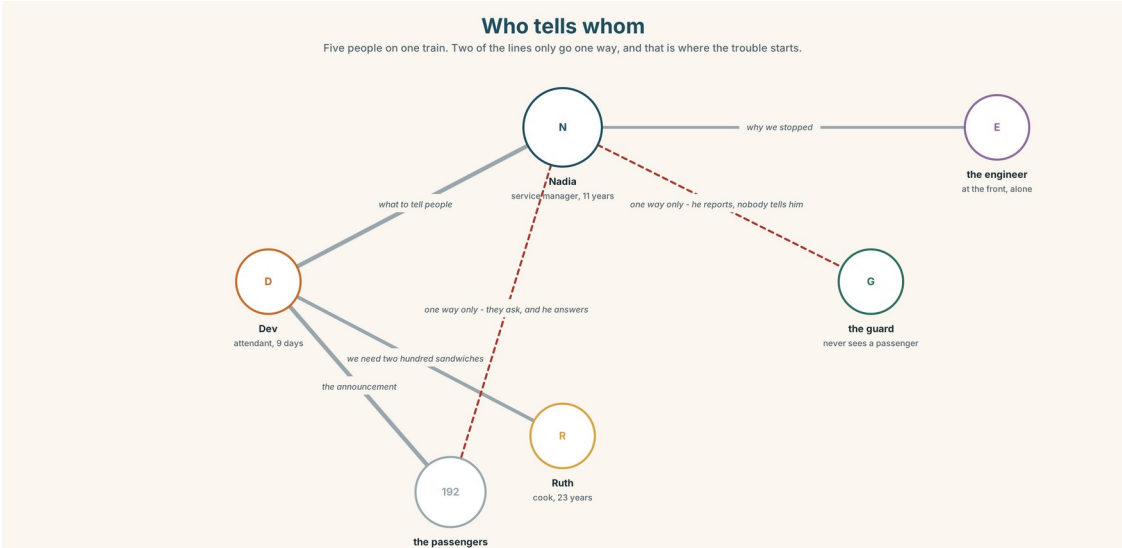

Record. Thirty seconds. Do not prepare.

Tell me about yesterday. What happened?

You will listen to this again on the last page.

Part 1 • Vocabulary Lab 1 ♦ B • THE SYSTEM

1A • Meet — a shift on the Prairie Line

6in}

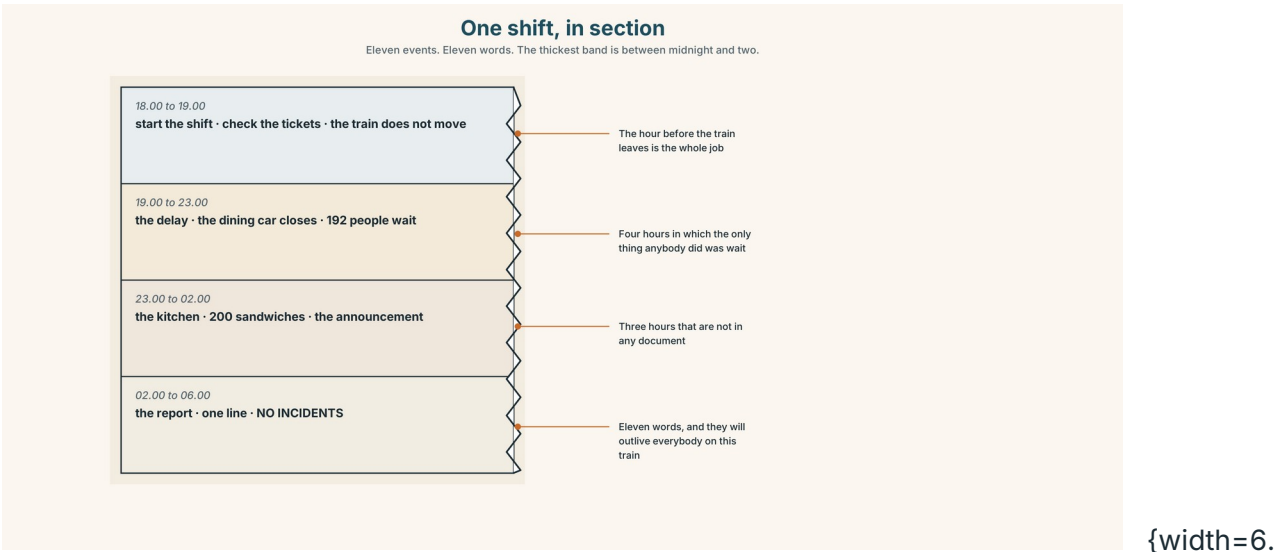

Who tells whom — Five people on one train. Two of the lines only go one way, and that is where the trouble starts.

shift	Twelve hours, and you cannot leave the building, because the building is moving.
crew	Six people. Four of them never see the passengers.
passenger	A hundred and ninety-two. Eleven of them will ask the same question.
delay	Four hours. It was nobody's fault and it is somebody's problem.
report	One page. It has a box for what went wrong and no box for anything else.
mistake	The only thing on this list that gets written down every time.

1B • Meet — the words

arrive • leave • begin • happen • passenger • crew • ticket • seat • delay • shift • report • mistake • lucky • awful • busy • calm

One shift, in section — Eleven events. Eleven words. The thickest band is between midnight and two.

1C • Sort — the job, or how it felt?

Put each word in the right box. Two of them can go in both. Which two, and why?

awful · calm · crew · lucky · ticket · report · shift · busy · delay · mistake

PART OF THE JOB	HOW IT FELT	BOTH
-----------------	-------------	------

1D • What a crew actually does start the shift	At six. The train leaves at seven, and the hour between is the whole job.

check the tickets	Twice. Once for the company and once to find out who is where.
serve the meals	Three sittings. The third one is where you learn things.
make an announcement	Thirty seconds, to a hundred and ninety-two people, with no second chance.
turn up	The single most important thing anybody on this list does.
sort out	What the report calls resolution and what everybody else calls Tuesday.

Now say them. Four of these six have a word in the middle you could remove. Which two cannot lose anything, and why not?

1E • Stretch — the phrases you will need today start the shift · make an announcement · turn up · sort out · What happened?

Match each phrase to the moment you need it.

1. A hundred and ninety-two people need to know something now. → _____
2. Somebody comes back to work after being ill. → _____
3. It is six in the evening and you put your jacket on. → _____
4. Two passengers have the same seat number. → _____
5. Your colleague looks terrible and you want to know why. → _____

1F • The hard one

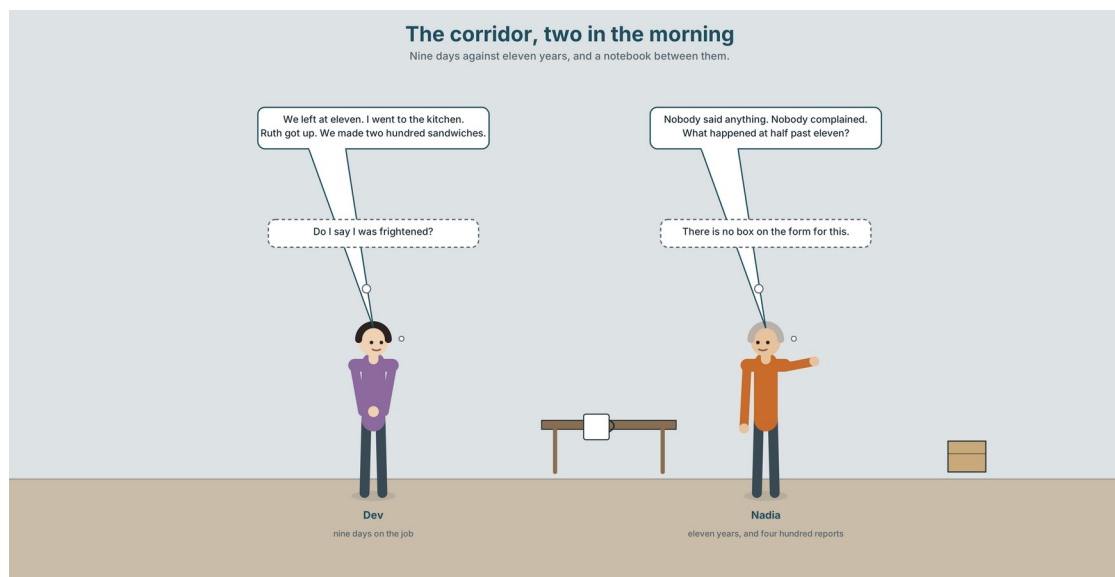

f You'll never believe it.

Practise it three times. Four words that tell the listener a story is coming and they should stop doing whatever they are doing.

1G • Own it

Write down three things that happened at your work or your school yesterday. Do not write your name. The class guesses whose day it is.

Part 2 • Listening ♦ A • THE WORLD

{width=6.

The corridor, two in the morning — Nine days against eleven years, and a notebook between them.

2A • Two in the morning 🎧 Track 1.1

1. The train left on time. ☐ T ☐ F
2. Dev made an announcement. ☐ T ☐ F
3. The dining car closed at nine. ☐ T ☐ F
4. Nobody complained. ☐ T ☐ F

Noticing. Four sentences from the recording.

1. We left at eleven.
2. I went to the kitchen.
3. She came back with Ruth.
4. Nobody said anything.

None of these four verbs has -ed on it. What happened to them instead?2B • Decoding clinic Track 1.2

Twenty seconds of Dev at speed. Three jobs.

1. Count the past verbs you hear.
2. Went, came and said are all one syllable. Which vowel is longest?
3. He says one sequence word four times. Which one, and what is he using it for?

Part 3 • Grammar Lab 1 B • THE SYSTEM*The verbs that change inside*3A • Notice

Look at the four sentences in Part 2 again.

1. What is the present form of each of the four verbs?
2. What changed — the beginning, the middle or the end?
3. Is the form the same after I, she and they?
4. Which of the four would you guess wrongly if you had never seen it?

3B • See

6in}

Bolted on, or changed inside — A regular verb grows a piece at the end. An irregular one changes in the middle.

3C • Know

One form for all six persons. I went, you went, she went, we went, they went. The past simple is the only tense in English with no person endings at all, which makes it easier than the present and harder to believe.

6in}

The words that hold a story together — Five on the line, one above it, and one drawn as a bracket over two things at once.

in order

first · then · next · after that · finally at the same time while

out of order

suddenly · at first · in the end · the next day

Why it matters. Half of everything anybody says to anybody is a story about yesterday, and the listener is building a line while you speak. Give them the order or they build it wrong.

3D • Use — controlled

Complete with the past of the verb.

We (1) _____ (leave) at eleven, four hours late. I (2) _____ (go) to the kitchen and Ruth (3) _____ (be) already awake. Nadia (4) _____ (come) back with two sandwiches. Nobody (5) _____ (say) anything. It (6) _____ (begin) as a bad night and it (7) _____ (become) a good one.

3E • Use — guided

Put each sentence into the past.

1. The train leaves at seven.
2. I go to the kitchen.
3. She comes back with Ruth.
4. We begin the shift at six.
5. Nobody says anything.

3F • Use — open

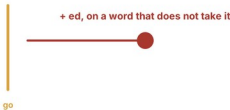

In pairs. Tell your partner about one day last week, in six sentences. Use a sequence word in every sentence. Your partner draws the line as you speak.

3G • Check — six items, mark your own

1. We _____ (leave) at eleven.
2. I _____ (go) to the kitchen.
3. She _____ (come) back at two.
4. Nobody _____ (say) anything.
5. × We leaved at eleven. → correct it.
6. × He goed to the kitchen. → correct it.

The ending on a word that had already changed

✗ He goed to the kitchen.

+ ed, on a word that does not take it

The -ed rule is real and it covers most verbs, so the ear reaches for it. But go has already made its past by replacing itself completely. Adding the ending is like paying twice: the listener hears the correction before they hear the meaning.

✓ He went to the kitchen.

one word, and no ending at all

Went is the past of go and it shares no letters with it. There is no rule to learn here and nothing to work out - it is one of about ten verbs in English whose past is a different word, and all ten are among the commonest words in the language.

What the writer thought:

Irregular verbs feel like exceptions to be memorised later. They are not the edge of the language, they are the middle of it: the twenty commonest verbs in English are almost all irregular, because the words people use most often are the ones that resist tidying up.

4C • The performance — one shift

Tell the story of one hour that went wrong — at work, at school, anywhere. One minute. You must:

use four sequence words · use three irregular past verbs · say one thing you felt · end with what happened in the end

Record it.

4D • Observer

One person listens for one thing: did the story stay in order?

4E • Two criteria

☐ Did I use at least three irregular past verbs correctly? ☐ Could somebody who was not there draw my timeline?

Part 5 • Reading A • THE WORLD

5A • Predict

The title is "Four hours, and one line in the log." What do you think the one line says?

5B • Read — sixty seconds

Four hours, and one line in the log

The train left Toronto four hours late. A freight train broke down eighty kilometres ahead and nobody could go anywhere until it moved.

Dev had been on the job for nine days. At eleven at night a hundred and ninety-two people had been sitting in a stationary train since seven, and the dining car had closed at nine.

He went to the kitchen and woke Ruth. She was not pleased. Then she got up, and between them they made two hundred sandwiches in ninety minutes. Nadia made an announcement at half past eleven and told everybody exactly what she knew, which was not much, and said it anyway.

Nobody complained. Three people wrote to the company to say so.

The company log for that night says: DELAY 4H — FREIGHT. NO INCIDENTS.

5C • Answer

1. How late was the train?
2. Why was it late?
3. How long had Dev worked there?
4. How many sandwiches did they make?
5. Why did Nadia make the announcement when she did not have much to tell them?
6. The log says NO INCIDENTS. Is that true, and what is it missing?

5D • Vocabulary in context

Guess from the text. Then check.

broke down · stationary · she was not pleased · between them · said it anyway

5E • The counter-text

The crew log for that night
Nine boxes. Eight of them are numbers and the ninth says NONE.

FIELD	ENTRY	BY
DATE	14 MAY	N.O.
SCHEDULED DEP.	19.08	--
ACTUAL DEP.	23.04	N.O.
DELAY	4 H 04	AUTO
REASON CODE	F3 - FREIGHT	N.O.
ARRIVAL	+3 H 51	AUTO
CREW ON DUTY	6	AUTO
PASSENGERS	192	AUTO

INCIDENTS
NONE

Signed N. Okafor, Service Manager
Time signed 02.41

Reason code F3 means the delay was caused by a freight movement. It records the cause and not the fault, which is deliberate: the company has twenty-two reason codes and none of them names anybody.

Four hours and four minutes, measured by a machine

F3. A cause, and carefully not a person

A hundred and ninety-two, counted automatically

The one box a human had to think about, and it says NONE

Signed at twenty to three, after a twelve-hour shift

{width=6.6in}

The crew log for that night — Nine boxes. Eight of them are numbers and the ninth says NONE.

Read the log and answer.

1. What time did the train leave, and what time was it supposed to leave?
2. What is the reason code, and does it say whose fault it was?
3. What is written in the INCIDENTS box?
4. Three people wrote to the company. Where on this page would that appear?

5F • Two texts

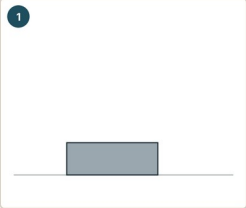

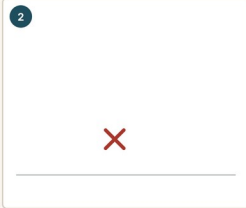

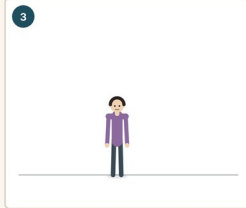

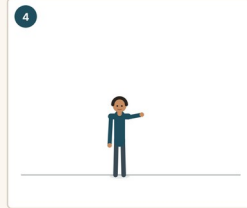

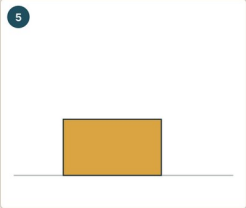

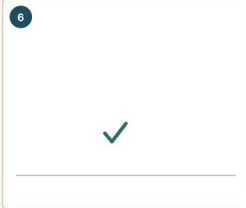

The reading describes two hundred sandwiches and one announcement. The log describes a four-hour delay and no incidents.

Which one will still exist in ten years? Say one sentence.

Part 6 • Vocabulary Lab 2 ♦ B • THE SYSTEM

Putting a story in order

Four hours, six panels
Each panel carries its own sequence word. Only one of them was planned by nobody.

1  FIRST - 19.00, the train does not move	2  THEN - 21.00, the dining car closes	3  NEXT - 23.00, Dev goes to the kitchen	4  SUDDENLY - Ruth gets up
5  AFTER THAT - 200 sandwiches	6  FINALLY - the announcement

{width=6.

6in}

Four hours, six panels — Each panel carries its own sequence word. Only one of them was planned by nobody.

6A • The ones that catch everybody then / after that both work; after that is slower and gives the listener a rest at first sets up a change that is coming. Never use it unless one is in the end

the result, not the last event

while

two things at once, and the verb after it is usually the long one

6B • Say them

first • then • next • after that • finally • before • while • suddenly

6C • Chunk

1. ____ that — the slow version of then
2. At ____ — and something is going to change
3. In the ____ — the result
4. ____ I was making the sandwiches... — two things at once
5. The ____ day — and the story continues
6. ____ ____ ? — the two words that ask for the whole story

6D • Contrast Clinic

Six items. while or when?

1. _____ the passengers were sleeping, the crew was working.
2. _____ we were making sandwiches, Nadia made the announcement.
3. _____ Ruth was cooking, Dev was checking the tickets.
4. _____ I arrived, the dining car was already closed.
5. _____ the freight train moved, we left.
6. _____ the train stopped, everybody looked up.

Part 7 • Pronunciation & Fluency Lab ♦ B • THE SYSTEM

The vowel in the middle

The vowel in the middle
The consonants do not move. One sound in the middle does all the work.

i → a	ee → e	a new word
the commonest change of all	the vowel gets shorter, not different	no pattern, and no help begin → began sit → sat give → gave drink → drank swim → swam	meet → met feel → felt keep → kept read → read sleep → slept	go → went be → was / were put → put cut → cut let → let the consonants on both sides are identical in every pair	read is spelled the same twice - only the length tells you which	the last three change nothing at all, which is the hardest kind to hear

{width=6.

6in}

The vowel in the middle — The consonants do not move. One sound in the middle does all the work.

7A • Hear

i → a: begin → began · sit → sat · give → gave ee → e: meet → met · read → read · feel → felt o → e: come → came · become → became — the spelling lies; listen to the sound

7B • Say

Say each pair three times. Then say this:

I came, I sat, I began. — three vowels, three verbs, no endings at all.

7C • Make it mean something

Say these two:

I read it. — present. The vowel is long: reed. I read it. — past. The vowel is short: red.

Same five letters, same spelling, two tenses. The only thing that tells your listener which one you mean is a vowel that lasts a tenth of a second. Which is which?

7D • Fluency 20

Twenty seconds: six things that happened to you yesterday, all irregular verbs. Three times, faster.

Part 8 • Writing ♦ C • THE PERFORMANCE

What happened • 50–70 words

8A • Read the model

On Tuesday we left Toronto four hours late. [the fact, with a day and a number]

At first nobody minded. Then the dining car closed and people began to ask questions. [at first, and the change it promised]

I went to the kitchen and woke the cook. She wasn't pleased, but she got up. [two irregular verbs, and one honest detail]

In the end we made two hundred sandwiches. Nobody complained. [the result, and the proof]

Questions about the writer's choices:

1. At first nobody minded. What does that tell the reader is coming?
2. She wasn't pleased, but she got up. Why keep the first half?
3. The last two sentences are six words long. Why so short at the end?

8B • The anti-model

On Tuesday the train was late. It was a difficult night. Everybody worked very hard. We did our best. In the end it was fine.

Correct English, and it could be any night on any train. Add two numbers, one irregular verb and one thing that somebody actually said.

8C • Plan

the fact, with a number → at first, and the change → what you did, with two irregular verbs → the result, short

8D • Write — 50 to 70 words

8E • Peer review — two things only

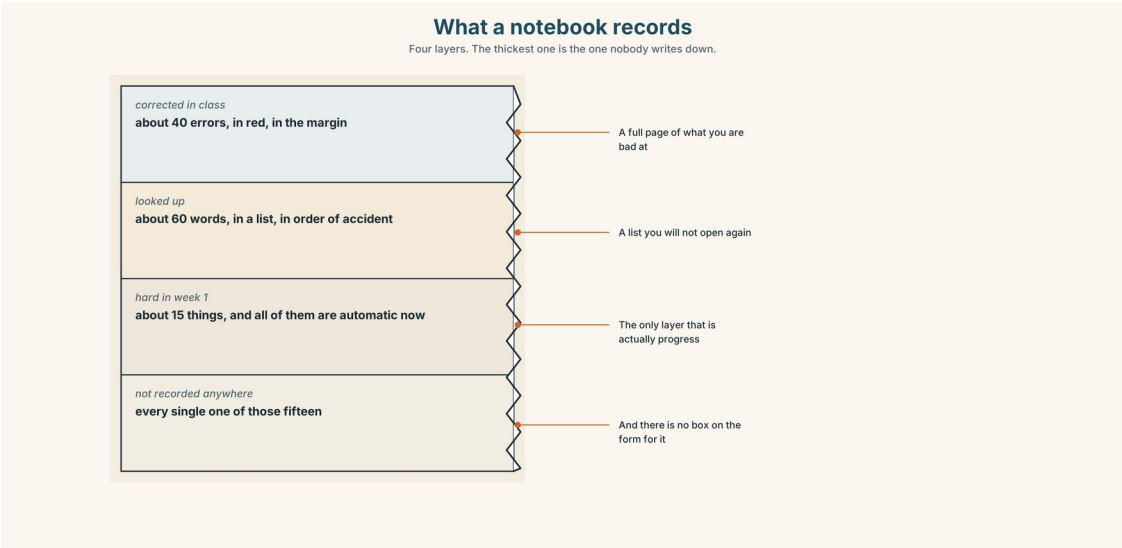

☐ Is the story in order, and can you draw it? ☐ Are there at least three irregular past verbs, all correct?

8F • Publish

On the wall, with no names. The class puts them in order of how badly the night went.

Part 9 • The File ♦ A • THE WORLD + C • THE PERFORMANCE

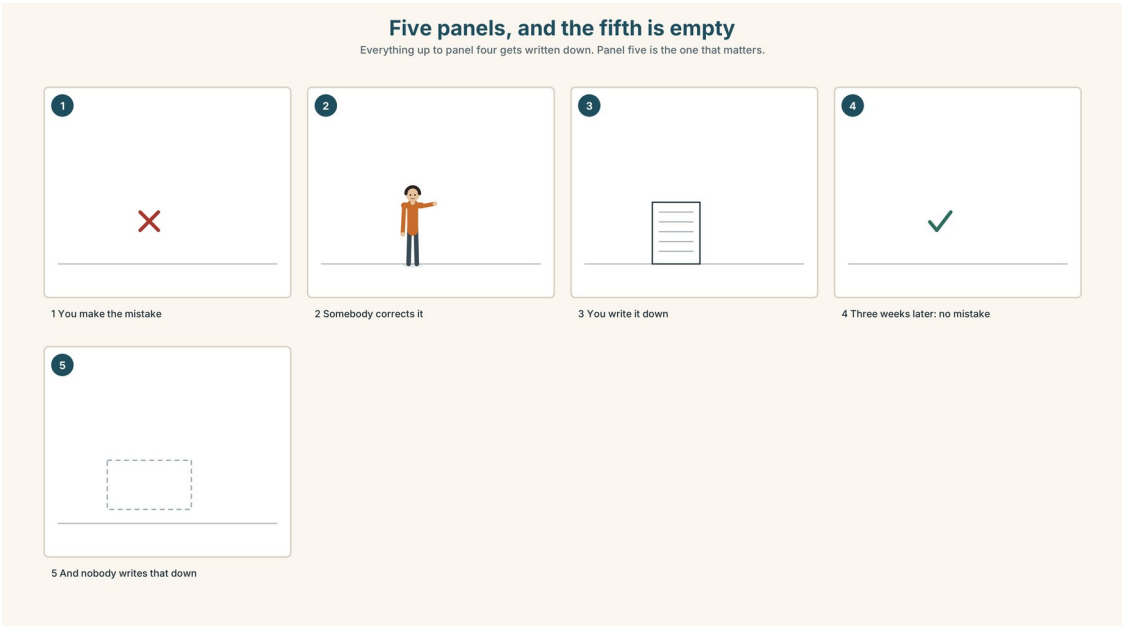

STUDY FILE • The log of what went right

6in}

What a notebook records — Four layers. The thickest one is the one nobody writes down.

9A • What gets written down

6in}

Five panels, and the fifth is empty — Everything up to panel four gets written down. Panel five is the one that matters.

What gets recorded	every error, in red, in the margin
What does not	every error you no longer make

What that does a notebook full of things you are bad at one line a week: this week I stopped...

The fix

9B • Your own log

At the end of each week, write one sentence in the past about something you could not do before and can do now. Not better. What, exactly.

Last week I didn't understand the announcements. On Thursday I understood one.

9C • Role play — the debrief

In pairs. One of you had a bad week. The other asks: What happened? and then, four times, And then? The point is the sequence, not the sympathy.

9D • The thing nobody wrote down

Think of one thing in your English that was hard in September and is not hard now. Nobody recorded it. Record it.

9E • Transfer — before next week

Write one sentence a day, in the past, about one English thing that happened. Seven sentences. Bring them.

Part 10 • Mediation & Interaction ♦ C • THE PERFORMANCE

{width=6.

6in}

Four hours, four records — The band at the bottom is almost empty, and it is the only one that survived the night.

10A • Relay

Half the class has what the crew did. Half has what the passengers knew. Build the four hours by speaking. Ten minutes.

10B • Simplify — for one person

A new crew member asks: What happened on Tuesday? Tell them in four sentences. They need to be able to act on it, not enjoy it.

10C • Online

Write one message to a friend about something that happened to you this week. Three sentences. Two sequence words, one irregular verb.

10D • Your language

Does your language have irregular past verbs? Say I went and I arrived in your language. Do they change in the same place?

Part 11 • The Decision ◆ C • THE PERFORMANCE

No incidents

The company's crew log has one box for what went wrong and no box for anything else.

On Tuesday the train was four hours late. Two people made two hundred sandwiches at midnight and one person told a hundred and ninety-two passengers the truth. The log says NO INCIDENTS, which is correct.

Option one: leave it. A log is for problems. Everything else is just the job.

Option two: add a box. Three lines, headed what the crew did. It takes ninety seconds to fill in at the end of a twelve-hour shift.

Option three: add the box and make it compulsory. Then it gets filled in, and then it gets filled in badly.

11A • The evidence

The same form, twice
On the left, the log as it is. On the right, three lines longer.

as it is

8 numbers · 1 word: NONE · signed 02.41

three lines longer

8 numbers · 3 lines of handwriting · signed 02.43

Find the six. One of them is the time at the bottom, and it is the argument against the whole idea.
6 differences — find them all

6in}

The same form, twice — On the left, the log as it is. On the right, three lines longer.

 Track 1.6. Nadia, 20 seconds: "I've written four hundred of these. The box says incidents. Nothing went wrong, so I wrote none. Everything that happened that night was not an incident."

11B • Talk about it

In threes. Use the frame. Everybody says one.

I think the company should _____, because _____.

Words you can use: report · crew · shift · delay · mistake · passenger · lucky

11C • Decide

Write two sentences. Choose, and say why.

I think the company should _____, because _____.

11D • Model decision

Add the box and leave it optional. A compulsory box produces four hundred identical sentences. An optional one gets filled in on the nights when there is something to say, and those are exactly the nights you want to read about.

11E • The Reveal

What happened. The company added three optional lines. In the first six months the box was filled in on about one night in nine, which the company thought was a failure.

Then something nobody expected: when a new crew member joined, the first thing they were given was the last twenty filled-in boxes. It had stopped being a record and become the only training document on the line.

One question. You do not have to answer it out loud.

The company wanted a record. What did it build instead?

Part 12 • Landing ♦ all three lines

12A • Recycle — twelve items

1. We _____ (leave) at eleven.
2. I _____ (go) to the kitchen.
3. She _____ (come) back at two.
4. Nobody _____ (say) anything.
5. It _____ (begin) at seven.
6. _____ that, everything was quiet. (the slow version of then)
7. _____ first, nobody minded.
8. In the _____, nobody complained.
9. _____ I was in the kitchen, Nadia made the announcement.
10. The _____ day, three people wrote to the company.
11. I need to _____ this _____. (two words — fix a problem)
12. _____ _____ ? (the two words that ask for a story)

12B • Consolidate — one task, everything in it

Write six sentences about one hour of one day last week. Four irregular past verbs, four sequence words, one thing you felt, and the result at the end.

12C • Can-do, with evidence

☐ I can tell what happened, in order. Evidence: 4C, 8D ☐ I can use irregular past verbs. Evidence: 3G ☐ I can use sequence words. Evidence: 6C ☐ I can hear the vowel that changes inside a verb. Evidence: 7C

12D • Replay

Record 0C again. Listen to both. What is different?

12E • Glossary — thirty-five words, as a map

THE PEOPLE • passenger • crew THE THINGS • ticket • seat • report • shift • delay WHAT HAPPENS • arrive • leave • begin • happen • mistake HOW IT FELT • lucky • awful • busy • calm

WHAT THE CREW DOES · start the shift · check the tickets · serve the meals · make an announcement · turn up · sort out THE ORDER · first · then · next · after that · finally · before · while · suddenly OUT OF ORDER · at first · in the end · the next day ASKING AND OPENING · What happened? · You'll never believe it.

Listen again. True or false?

1. She bought a return ticket. ☐ T ☐ F
2. She didn't book in advance. ☐ T ☐ F
3. She travelled last summer. ☐ T ☐ F
4. She bought the ticket this morning. ☐ T ☐ F

Noticing. Four sentences from the recording.

1. I didn't book it.
2. Did you travel last summer?
3. She didn't come back.
4. When did you buy it?

Every verb after did and didn't is plain. What has happened to the past?

2B • Decoding clinic Track 2.2

Twenty seconds of Tom at speed. Three jobs.

1. Count how many questions he asks.
2. Did you is two words and he says it as one. Write what you hear.
3. He says one time marker three times. Which one, and is it a date?

One weight, and it moves to the front — In the positive the past sits on the verb. In a question it has moved onto did.

3C • Know

positive	the past is on the verb	I booked it. She came back. negative	didn't + the plain verb	I didn't book it. She didn't come back. question	did at the front, plain verb	Did you book it? Did she come back? question word first	when · where · why · how long	When did you buy it? Why did she leave?

Did is the same for everybody. No s, no was, no change at all: did I, did you, did she, did they. It is the simplest helper in the language and it is doing all the work.

Why it matters. Almost every question anybody asks about the past is one of these four shapes, and the answer is almost always a time marker.

3D • Use — controlled

Complete with did, didn't, or the past of the verb.

I (1) _____ (buy) the ticket three weeks ago. I (2) _____ book the return — I only wanted a single. (3) _____ you travel last summer? — No, I (4) _____. I (5) _____ (come) in March. Why (6) _____ she leave?

3E • Use — guided

Make each sentence negative, then make it a question.

2. They set off at six.
3. He missed the train.
4. We changed at Winnipeg.
5. The guard waited.

3F • Use — open

3G • Check — six items, mark your own

1. I _____ book the return. (negative)
2. _____ you travel last summer?
3. When _____ you buy it?
4. She _____ come back. (negative)
5. × Did you bought it? → correct it.
6. × I didn't went. → correct it.

The past marked twice, again

Did you bought it?

Did

bought - and did is already past

Did is the past of do. Once it is at the front of the sentence, the listener knows when this happened before they reach the verb at all. Marking it again is the same error as Does she checks, one unit of the last book, in a new costume.

Did you buy it?

Did

buy - plain, and that is not a present tense

The bare form after did is not the present. It is the dictionary form, which English uses whenever a helper has already said when. The same applies after didn't: I didn't buy it, never I didn't bought it.

What the writer thought:
Irregular verbs make this worse, because bought feels like a different word rather than an ending - so it does not feel like doubling up. It is. Buy and bought are the same verb wearing two labels, and only one label is allowed.

5B • Read — sixty seconds

One thousand one hundred, and three hundred and ten

In 1991 Mirror Lake had one thousand one hundred people, a school with four classes, two shops and a grain elevator.

It has three hundred and ten people now. The school closed in 2009. One shop is left and it opens four days a week.

Nobody made a decision. There was no closing, no announcement and no day on which the town got smaller. Children finished school and did not come back, and nobody who left said they were leaving for good. They said they were going to Winnipeg for a year.

Tom Wong has been the station agent for thirty-one years. He did not leave. He says he never decided to stay either, and that in a place like this those are the same thing.

The train stops for forty seconds. Last year it picked up five hundred and eleven people and put down four hundred and ninety-six.

5C • Answer

1. How many people lived in Mirror Lake in 1991?
2. When did the school close?
3. How long has Tom been the station agent?
4. How long does the train stop for?

I stayed for seven years. I came back last summer, for a week, and then I didn't leave. [the number that contradicts the plan]

Nobody asked me why I came back. That is why I stayed. [the sentence that is actually about the town]

Questions about the writer's choices:

1. The second line is two negatives. Why are they more informative than a positive?
2. I stayed for seven years. What does that do to the word a year in line one?
3. The last line is about other people. Why end there?

Part 11 • The Decision ◆ C • THE PERFORMANCE

Forty seconds

The train stops at Mirror Lake for forty seconds, twice a week each way.

Last year it picked up five hundred and eleven people and put down four hundred and ninety-six. That is about one and a half people per stop. The stop costs the company about eleven thousand dollars a year in fuel and time.

Option one: keep it. One and a half people is one and a half people, and three hundred and ten of them have no other way out.

Option two: make it request-only all year. The train stops if somebody books. In winter this is already the rule, and in winter about a third of the requests are not seen in time.

Option three: close it. The nearest other stop is a hundred and forty kilometres away.

Words you can use: journey · platform · timetable · far · wait · slow · return

11C • Decide

I think the company should _____, because _____.

11D • Model decision

Keep the scheduled stop and fix the request system, which is the part that is actually broken. A third of winter requests are not seen in time, and that is a number about a piece of software, not about a town.

11E • The Reveal

What happened. The company kept the stop and moved the request system to a telephone number that rings in the guard's van. Missed requests fell from a third to almost none.

Then something nobody expected: the number of people getting on rose by eleven per cent in the first year, because people who had assumed the train no longer stopped found out that it did.

One question. You do not have to answer it out loud.

The stop had not changed for four years. What had?

One seat, five materials — Every line carries two numbers: what the part costs and how long it lasts.

price	What it says on the invoice.
cost	Price, plus everything that happens afterwards.
quality	The word people use when they cannot say which number they mean.
good value	Not cheap. Cheap for what you get.
break down	What a machine does. Also what an argument does.
throw away	The decision that is made at the moment of buying, not at the moment of throwing.

The comparison marked twice

✗ It is more cheaper than cloth.

cheaper - and it is already comparative

Cheap is one syllable, so it takes -er, and once it has taken it the word is already a comparison. More in front says the same thing a second time. The sentence is not wrong because it is ungrammatical; it is wrong because it is paying twice for one idea.

✓ It is cheaper than cloth.

one marker, and the sentence is shorter

One comparative marker, chosen by the length of the adjective: -er for short words, more for long ones. Never both. The only words that break this are good, bad and far, and they break it by changing shape entirely.

What the writer thought:

More feels like an intensifier - like very - so it seems harmless to add. It is not an intensifier. It is the comparative itself, doing exactly the job that -er does, which is why the two cannot share a word.

5A • Predict

The title is "Nineteen dollars and forty-one dollars." Which one do you think the company bought?

5B • Read — sixty seconds

Nineteen dollars and forty-one dollars

A cloth seat cover costs forty-one dollars. It lasts about seven years and it can be repaired, usually three or four times. A synthetic cover costs nineteen dollars. It lasts about three years and it cannot be repaired at all.

Fourteen hundred seats. Cloth is fifty-seven thousand dollars and synthetic is twenty-seven.

Over ten years, cloth needs to be bought once and a half. Synthetic needs to be bought three and a third times. Cloth is eighty-six thousand over ten years and synthetic is eighty-nine.

The two numbers are almost the same. The difference is that the cloth money leaves in one year and the synthetic money leaves in four pieces, and the person who signs for it is not the same person each time.

That is not an argument about seats. It is an argument about who is still here in four years.

The word that reached for a noun that was not there

It's not my.

my - and then nothing

not

My is a word that holds something. It cannot be the last word in a sentence any more than the can. The listener hears my and waits for the noun, and the sentence stops, so they assume they missed something and ask you to repeat it.

mine - a word built to stand alone

not

English keeps two sets of these words: one for in front of a noun and one for on its own. Six and six, and only his belongs to both. Once you have the pairs - my/mine, your/yours, her/hers, our/ours, their/theirs - the rest is automatic.

What the writer thought:
Many languages have one form and let the noun disappear. English kept two, which is why this error survives into C1 in speech even in learners who would never write it.

5B • Read — sixty seconds

Two adults and up to three children

The family fare says: two adults and up to three children, travelling together, for the price of two adults.

In coach 6 last Tuesday there were eleven people. One was a grandmother travelling with two grandchildren: three people, one adult, and she paid full fare for all three.

Two were sisters with four children between them: six people, and the fare covers five, so one child paid full price. They could not decide which child, so they split it.

One was a man travelling with his wife's mother, who is eighty-one and cannot travel alone. Two adults, no children, no discount.

And one was Sam, who is seventeen, which the policy counts as an adult, travelling alone to the aunt who brought him up.

Four bookings. One of them got the family fare, and it was the only one in which nobody was looking after anybody.

5C • Answer

1. What does the family fare say?
2. How many people were in coach 6?
3. Why did one child pay full price?
4. How old is Sam?
5. Why did the grandmother pay full fare for three people?

The old woman at the back brought all three of them up. She isn't related to any of them. [the sentence the photograph cannot show]

Questions about the writer's choices:

1. not my father. Why correct something the reader has not said yet?
2. she took it. How does that make the writer's cousin part of the picture?
3. The last line is the only one that could not be guessed. Why is it last?

Part 11 • The Decision ♦ C • THE PERFORMANCE

Who counts

The family fare covers two adults and up to three children travelling together. Last year it was claimed on nineteen thousand bookings and refused on about four hundred.

Option one: leave it. The rule is clear, it is cheap to administer, and four hundred refusals is two per cent.

Option two: define family by household. Anybody who lives at the same address. Clear, fair, and it needs an address check at the counter, which takes ninety seconds and a document.

Option three: drop the definition. Any four people travelling together on one booking. Simple, generous, and it costs about nine hundred thousand dollars a year.

11D • Model decision

Any four people on one booking, and stop calling it the family fare. The company is not selling a definition of family; it is selling empty seats. Every minute spent deciding whether a grandmother counts is a minute spent making the product worse.

11E • The Reveal

What happened. The company renamed it the Group Fare and dropped the definition. The cost was six hundred thousand, not nine hundred, because a third of the new claims were people who would not have travelled at all.

Then something nobody expected: complaints at ticket counters fell by a quarter, and almost all of the drop was in complaints that had nothing to do with fares. The clerks had stopped being the people who decide who is a family.

One question. You do not have to answer it out loud.

The rule cost the company four hundred refusals a year. What was it costing the clerks?

The to with nowhere to stand

✗ You should to sit down.

to - and there is no room for it should

Should is a helper, and a helper and its verb touch. Nothing goes between them: not to, not an ending, not another helper. This is the third time you have met this rule - it was true of can in the last book and it is true of must in two units' time.

✓ You should sit down.

sit - touching, and plain

should

Helper, verb, nothing in between. The test is simple: if you can put a verb straight after it with no to, it is one of this family - can, could, should, must, will, might - and they all behave the same way.

What the writer thought:
Want, need, try and like all take to: I want to sit, I need to rest. So to feels like the normal way to join two verbs, and it is - except after this one small family of about ten words, which happen to be the ten you use most.

Four nights from a hospital

The train is four nights long. At its furthest point it is eleven hours from a town with a hospital.

There is a cupboard with a green cross on it in the kitchen car. It has a padlock. Inside there are bandages, a blanket, and a list of telephone numbers.

When somebody is ill, the crew make an announcement and ask whether there is a doctor on board. Last year this happened forty-one times. A doctor or a nurse answered thirty of those times.

Eleven times, nobody answered.

Nadia has done this fourteen times in eleven years. She says the worst part is not the eleven. It is that the announcement tells a hundred and ninety-two people that there is something wrong, and she has to say it in a voice that does not frighten them, and she has never been trained to do either of those things.

3. When was the cupboard last checked?
4. The last line is a telephone number. On a train eleven hours from a town, what does a telephone number get you?

You've had the cough for three weeks. That's not a cold any more. [the fact, and the thing they already know]

When mine went on that long, I left it another month and then lost a week of work. [the writer's own mistake, before any advice]

Why don't you see somebody in Winnipeg? You're there for four hours on Thursday. [the suggestion, with the obstacle already removed]

I know you won't. Take it easy anyway. [the sentence that admits the advice will be refused]

Questions about the writer's choices:

1. The first line tells them something they know. Why is that useful?
2. When mine went on that long... Why put the writer's own mistake before the advice?
3. I know you won't. Does that make the advice weaker or stronger?

8B • The anti-model

You should see a doctor. You shouldn't work when you are ill. You should rest more. You should drink more water. You should take care of yourself.

Forty-one medical events last year. A doctor or nurse answered thirty times. Eleven times nobody did.

Option one: leave it. Thirty out of forty-one, and in eleven years nobody has died.

Option two: train two crew per train as first responders. Four days of training each, about two hundred thousand dollars a year across the fleet, and it does not make anybody a doctor.

Option three: carry a nurse on every train. About one and a half million a year, and on most nights they would have nothing at all to do.

11D • Model decision

Train two per train, and train them in the announcement as well as in the bandages. The clinical gap is real and it is small. The gap that happens forty-one times a year, every time, is that somebody has to speak to a hundred and ninety-two frightened people, and nobody has ever been shown how.

11E • The Reveal

What happened. The company trained two crew per train. In the first year the number of events was almost the same and the time to first response fell from four minutes to under one.

Then something nobody expected: the number of announcements fell by two thirds. The trained crew could tell which events needed a doctor and which needed a chair and a glass of water, and most of them needed the second thing.

One question. You do not have to answer it out loud.

The training was bought to find doctors. What did it actually buy?

instant decision	decided as you speak	I'll have the fish, then.

Will never changes. No s, no to, no do in the question: will I, will she, will they. This is the fourth helper of its kind and the family is now closed: can, should, must, will.

{width=6.

Where they stand. Maybe and perhaps go at the front of the sentence. Probably and definitely go after will and before the verb: It will probably close.

Why it matters. Nobody can predict anything. What people can do is say how sure they are, and the whole value of a prediction is in that second piece of information.

Four hundred thousand dollars a year

The dining car loses about four hundred thousand dollars a year. Everybody at head office knows this number. It is in every plan.

The company also surveys passengers. The survey asks why people chose this train instead of flying, which takes five hours instead of four nights. Sixty-one per cent say the dining car. Nobody at head office quotes that number, because it is in a different document.

In the 2035 plan, the dining car is replaced by a machine that sells sandwiches. The plan says this will improve the service, and it probably will — the sandwiches will be fresher and they will always be available, and nobody will wait forty minutes for a table.

What the plan does not say is what will happen at table nine, where four strangers have been talking for an hour and a half, and where two of them will exchange addresses before the train reaches Jasper.

5C • Answer

1. How much does the dining car lose?
2. What does the survey ask?
3. What percentage say the dining car?

7C • Make it mean something

Say these two:

I'll do it. — an offer, and it sounds like nothing at all I WILL do it. — a promise, or an argument, and the full form is the whole difference

The contraction is the normal form. Using the full form is not more correct; it is more emphatic, and sometimes more angry. Which is which?

Part 8 • Writing C • THE PERFORMANCE

A prediction • 50–70 words

8A • Read the model

In ten years the engine will be electric. That one is certain — the order is signed. [the prediction, and the evidence]

The dining car will probably close. I'd say seventy per cent. [a prediction with a number attached to the doubt]

I don't think the route will change. There is nowhere else to put it. [the negative in the English place, with a reason]

What I can't predict is whether anybody will still want four nights. We'll see. [the honest admission, last]

Questions about the writer's choices:

1. the order is signed. Why put the evidence immediately after the prediction?
2. I'd say seventy per cent. What does a number do that probably does not?
3. The last line admits the writer does not know. Does that make the first three weaker?

8B • The anti-model

In ten years everything will be different. Technology will improve. Trains will be faster and better. People will travel more. The future will be interesting.

Part 11 • The Decision ◆ C • THE PERFORMANCE

The dining car in 2035

The dining car loses four hundred thousand dollars a year. Sixty-one per cent of passengers say it is why they chose the train.

Option one: close it. Replace it with a machine. Saves four hundred thousand, and the sandwiches will be fresher.

Option two: keep it exactly as it is. Nothing improves, nothing gets worse, and in 2035 somebody will have this argument again with worse numbers.

Option three: make it the product. Advertise the train as four nights of dinner with strangers. Costs about two hundred thousand to try and will either work completely or not at all.

What happened. The company tried it on two services. Bookings on those two rose eleven per cent and the dining car still lost money — about three hundred thousand instead of four.

law	Made by a government. The only one with a fine on the end.
rule	Made by a company. It can be changed by an email.
safety	The word that is used to end an argument.
danger	The thing the word safety is about, and it is measured in almost none of the signs.
emergency	About four times a year, and the whole design is for those four.
warning	A sign that tells you something, rather than telling you to do something.

NOT NECESSARY - an open door

Must and have to are both a wall in front of you. Mustn't is a wall in the other direction. Don't have to is not a wall at all - it is a door you may walk through or not, and swapping it with mustn't changes freedom into prohibition.

{width=6.

6in}

Three of these four mean the same thing — The fourth is drawn in a different colour because it means something else entirely.

3C • Know

compulsory	must / have to	You must wear a seatbelt. We have to check them.
forbidden	mustn't	You mustn't touch it. It mustn't be locked.
not necessary	don't have to	You don't have to sign it.
the difference	must is the speaker's rule; have to is somebody else's	I must stop smoking / I have to wear this.

Mustn't and don't have to are not opposites of each other. Mustn't is a wall. Don't have to is an open door that you may walk through or not. Getting these two the wrong way round is the commonest serious error in this unit and it changes the meaning completely.

Inside the rule, or outside it

The grammar is nearly identical. Who is making the rule is not.

MUST - the speaker

must get more sleep

nobody told me this ⇕ same obligation, different author

HAVE TO - the world

I

have to wear a helmet

somebody else decided

Have to behaves like an ordinary verb: he HAS to, did you HAVE to, I HAD to. Must has no past and no s, so had to does the past for both of them.

{width=6.

6in}

Inside the rule, or outside it — The grammar is nearly identical. Who is making the rule is not.

must — from the speaker	I must get more sleep. You must come and see us. have to — from outside	I have to wear a helmet. She has to fill in the form. has to	the only one of the four that changes for he and she
no past for must	I had to does the work of both

Why it matters. Every job, every country and every building you enter has a set of these, and knowing which of the four you are being given tells you whether to argue.

3D • Use — controlled

Complete with must, mustn't, have to, has to or don't have to.

You (1) _____ touch the handle. It is for an emergency only. We (2) _____ check them every trip — the inspector requires it. You (3) _____ sign the form. It is optional. She (4) _____ fill in a report every time one is used. I (5) _____ remember to tell the crew about this. (the speaker's own rule)

3E • Use — guided

Say whether each one is compulsory, forbidden or not necessary, then write it with the right form.

1. Wearing a seatbelt in a car.
2. Touching the emergency handle.
3. Signing the visitor book at this school.
4. Carrying a licence when you drive.
5. Arriving an hour early for a train.

3F • Use — open

In pairs. Describe the rules of a place you know. Five rules, and at least one of each of the three kinds. Your partner must say which kind each one is.

3G • Check — six items, mark your own

1. You _____ touch it. (forbidden)
2. We _____ check them every trip. (compulsory, from outside)
3. You _____ sign it. (not necessary)
4. She _____ fill in a report. (compulsory, and watch the form)
5. × You don't must touch it. → correct it.
6. × She must to wear a helmet. → correct it.

The open door where a wall was meant

✗ You don't have to touch it.

The speaker meant a prohibition and produced permission. To an English ear this sentence means: it is not necessary, but go ahead if you want to. On an emergency handle that is the opposite of the intended meaning, and the listener has no way of knowing it was a mistake.

✓ You mustn't touch it.

Mustn't is the prohibition. The test that never fails: don't have to can always be replaced by it is not necessary, and mustn't can always be replaced by it is forbidden. Try both on your sentence before you say it.

What the writer thought:
In most languages the negative of must is the prohibition, so don't have to looks like it ought to be one. English split the two about four hundred years ago and kept both halves, and this is the single most consequential vocabulary error at A2.

Four times in eleven years

There are twenty-two emergency door handles on this train. In eleven years, four have been pulled.

Three of the four were mistakes. Somebody leaned on one. A child reached one. A passenger thought it was the light switch. Each time, the train stopped, the crew walked the length of it, and about fifty minutes were lost.

The fourth was in February, at two in the morning, when a man in car 7 had a seizure and the nearest crew member was six cars away. A passenger pulled the handle. The train stopped. The crew came. He is alive.

The company wants to put breakable covers over all twenty-two handles. The covers will stop the three. They will also cost about eight seconds, and in February eight seconds would probably not have mattered.

A rule that outlived its reason — Five panels. Only the fifth contains a question.

What people say	I must write every new word down
Where it came from	a teacher, usually in childhood

Whether it works	sometimes, for some people, for some kinds of word
Who checks	nobody, ever

9B • Must, have to, or nothing at all

Take three of your own study rules and sort them. Which are must — your own? Which are have to — somebody else's? Which are don't have to and you are doing them anyway?

9C • Role play — the inspector

In pairs. One of you inspects the other's study habits and asks Why? after every answer, four times. The point is to reach a rule whose source nobody can name.

9D • The rule you can drop

Find one study rule you follow that nobody made and nobody checks and that is not working. Drop it this week. Write down what you did with the time.

9E • Transfer — before next week

Write down every English rule you followed this week and who made it. Bring the list. Mark the ones with no name against them.

Part 10 • Mediation & Interaction ♦ C • THE PERFORMANCE

6in}

Twenty-two handles, eleven years — The last band has one event in it that no amount of data can weigh.

10A • Relay

Half the class has the safety rules. Half has what the crew actually does. Build the real picture by speaking. Ten minutes.

10B • Simplify — for one person

A passenger asks: When am I allowed to pull that handle? Answer in three sentences. They are frightened, and they are asking because of the sign.

10C • Online

Write one message to a classmate about three rules where you work or study. Three sentences. One must, one mustn't, one don't have to.

10D • Your language

Does your language use one word for must and have to? Say I have to work tomorrow and I must stop smoking in your language. Is it the same word?

Part 11 • The Decision ♦ C • THE PERFORMANCE

Twenty-two red handles

Four pulls in eleven years. Three mistakes, costing about fifty minutes each. One real, in February, and a man is alive.

Option one: fit breakable covers on all twenty-two. Stops the three. Costs about eight seconds in a real emergency and eleven thousand dollars to fit.

Option two: leave them. Three false alarms in eleven years is one every four years, and fifty minutes is fifty minutes.

Option three: fit covers on the eighteen handles in areas with no crew presence, and leave the four near the crew cars uncovered.

11A • The evidence

The handle, with and without a cover
The same handle. One of them a child can reach and one of them needs a hammer.

as it is	with the cover
open · 0 seconds · a child can reach it · 3 mistakes in 11 years	BREAK GLASS · 8 seconds · a hammer on a chain · 0 mistakes

Find the six. One of them is how far away the nearest crew member is, and it is not drawn on either picture.
6 differences — find them all

{width=6.

The handle, with and without a cover — The same handle. One of them a child can reach and one of them needs a hammer.

 Track 7.6. Nadia, 20 seconds: "In February I was six cars away. Somebody I have never met decided in two seconds to do something that would cost them five hundred dollars if they were wrong. I would like them to be able to keep doing that."

11B • Talk about it

In threes. Use the frame. Everybody says one.

I think the company should _____, because _____.

Words you can use: safety · danger · emergency · rule · law · warning · allowed

11C • Decide

Write two sentences. Choose, and say why.

I think the company should _____, because _____.

11D • Model decision

Option three, and take the fine off the notice. The covers belong where nobody is watching. The five-hundred-dollar line belongs nowhere: it is the only part of this system that makes a stranger hesitate for two seconds, and two seconds is the entire thing we are trying to buy.

11E • The Reveal

What happened. The company fitted covers to eighteen handles and reprinted the notice with the penalty line in the smallest type instead of the largest.

Then something nobody expected: in the next four years there were two pulls, both real, and both at covered handles. The eight seconds were spent and nobody noticed them. What had changed was that passengers now believed they were allowed.

One question. You do not have to answer it out loud.

The covers were fitted to stop mistakes. What actually changed the numbers?

Part 12 • Landing ◆ all three lines

12A • Recycle — twelve items

1. You _____ touch it. (forbidden)
2. We _____ check them every trip. (compulsory, from outside)
3. You _____ sign it. (not necessary)
4. She _____ fill in a report. (and watch the form)
5. It's not _____.
6. It's _____. (the law says no)
7. Who is _____ for this?
8. You have to _____ the rules.
9. If you drive too fast you will _____ . (three words)
10. Please _____ this form. (two words)
11. (Unit 6) It will _____ close. (seventy per cent)
12. (Unit 5) You _____ lift that. (advice against)

12B • Consolidate — one task, everything in it

Write the rules of a place you know, in six sentences. Two must or have to, two mustn't, one don't have to, and one sentence saying who made a rule.

12C • Can-do, with evidence

☐ I can say what is compulsory and what is forbidden. Evidence: 4C, 8D ☐ I can tell mustn't and don't have to apart. Evidence: 6D ☐ I can say who made a rule. Evidence: 4C ☐ I can hear and say have to as one word. Evidence: 7C

12D • Replay

Record 0C again. Listen to both. What is different?

Part 0 • The Big Picture ♦ A • THE WORLD

{width=6.

6in}

The crew room, half past six in the morning — Fourteen things to find. One of the two people has written a number and stopped.

What have you tried?

By the end of this unit you can say what you have done in your life, without saying when.

◆ A • THE WORLD

A form with one box on it, and two people who cannot both be measured by it

◆ B • THE SYSTEM

the present perfect for experience · ever and never · 22 words for skills and firsts · past participles · the have you cannot hear

◆ C • THE PERFORMANCE

You find out three things about somebody that are not on their form

0A • Find it — fourteen things

Find these in the picture. Write the number.

☐ a table ☐ a chair ☐ a form ☐ a pen ☐ a notice ☐ a board ☐ a cup ☐ a bag ☐ a window ☐ a clock ☐ a door ☐ a box ☐ a light ☐ a coat

Three of these words are not in the picture. Which three?

an adventure · a prize · a language

0B • Guess it

Look at the two people filling in the form. Which one has stopped writing? Say one thing. You can use these words:

year · form · write · number · experience

0C • Say it

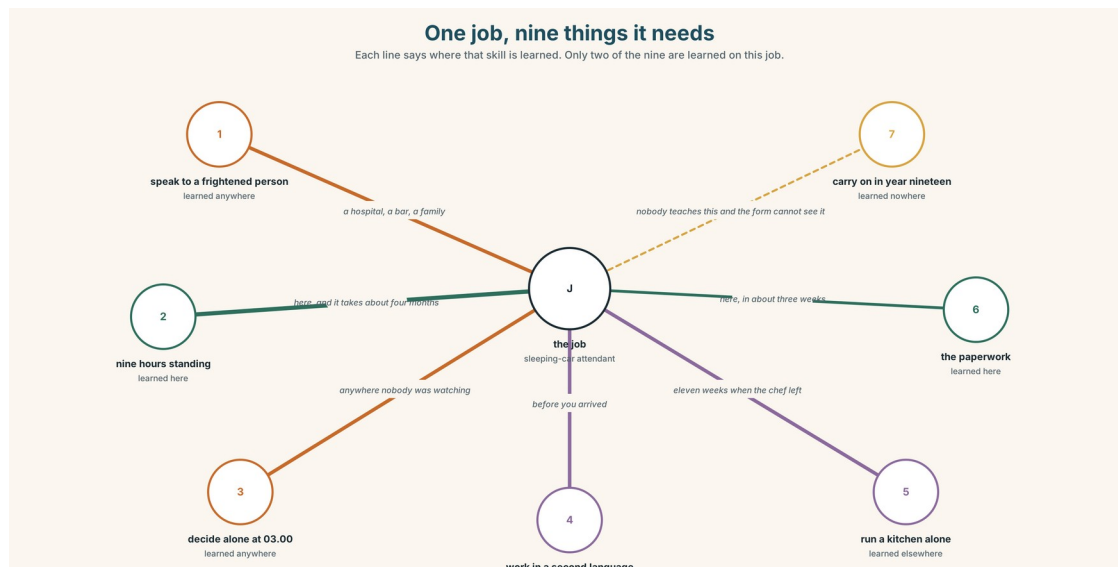

Record. Thirty seconds. Do not prepare.

Name three things you have done that are not on any form you have ever filled in.

Part 1 • Vocabulary Lab 1 ♦ B • THE SYSTEM

1A • Meet — what a form asks and what it misses

{width=6.

6in}

One job, nine things it needs — Each line says where that skill is learned. Only two of the nine are learned on this job.

experience

Measured in years, which measures time and not skill.

skill

The thing the years were supposed to stand for.

moment

The unit experience is actually made of.

learn a skill

Something that can be dated.
Experience cannot.

try something new

The one activity that produces experience fastest and is nowhere on the form.

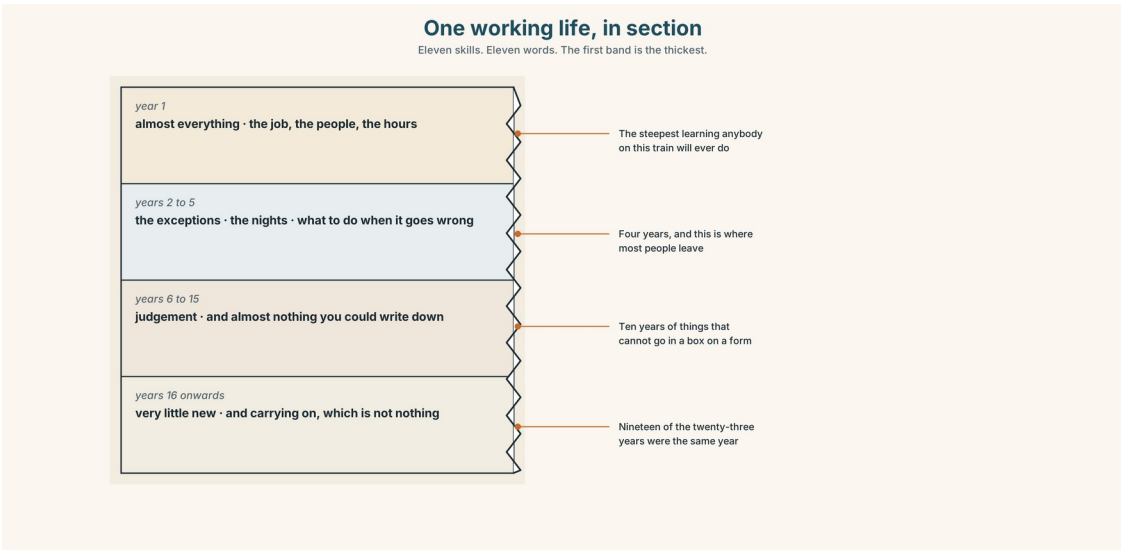

carry on

What twenty-three years is made of, and it is not nothing.

1B • Meet — the words

experience • skill • moment • adventure • abroad • foreign • language • swim • drive • cook • fly • climb • sing • ride • win • lose

{width=6.

6in}

One working life, in section — Eleven skills. Eleven words. The first band is the thickest.

1C • Sort — the thing, or the doing of it?

Put each word in the right box. Two of them can go in both. Which two, and why?

cook · adventure · climb · experience · language · moment · skill · win · drive · swim

A THING YOU HAVE	A THING YOU DO	BOTH
------------------	----------------	------

1D • What people put on forms

learn a skill	Has a start and an end. You can name the week.
pass a test	Has a date, a number and a certificate.
try something new	Has none of those, and it is the best predictor of the other three.
win a prize	Goes on a form. Means almost nothing about a job.
take up	Begin something and keep doing it.
carry on	Keep doing something after the reason has gone.

Now say them. Three of these six produce a piece of paper and three do not. Which three, and which of the other three would you most want to know about somebody?

1E • Stretch — the phrases you will need today

learn a skill · pass a test · try something new · take up · carry on

Match each phrase to the moment you need it.

1. You begin something in January and you are still doing it in June. → _____

2. There is a certificate on the wall with a date on it. → _____
3. It is week three and you are bad at it and you do not stop. → _____
4. You have never done it before and you do it anyway. → _____
5. Six weeks, a teacher and a thing you can now do. → _____

1F • The hard one

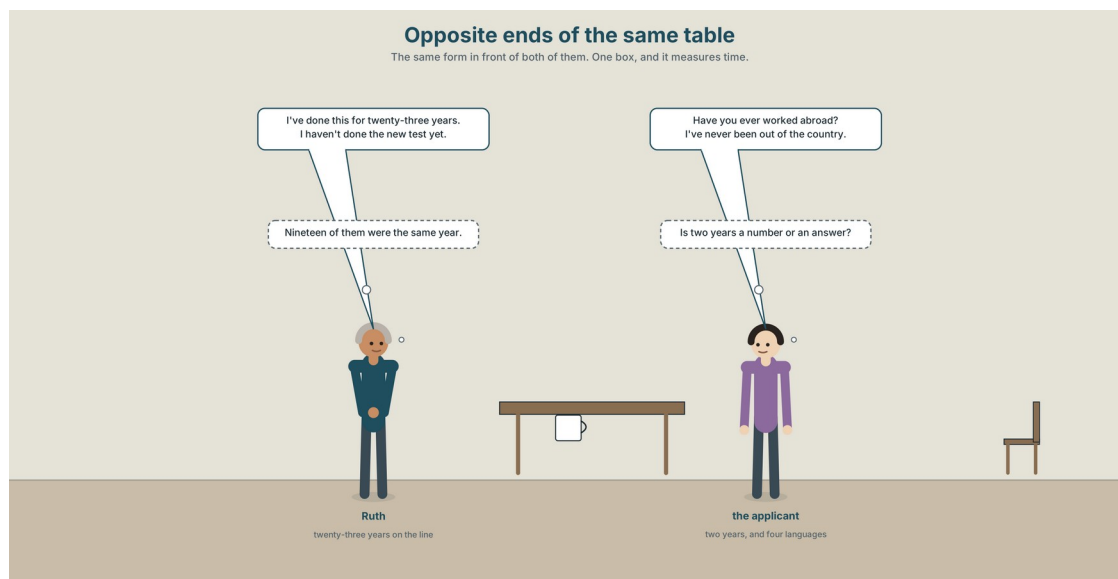

f Not yet.

Practise it three times. Two words, and they are the difference between no and not so far.

1G • Own it

Write down three things you have done that most people in this room have not. Do not write your name. The class guesses whose they are.

Part 2 • Listening ♦ A • THE WORLD

{width=6.

6in}

Opposite ends of the same table — The same form in front of both of them. One box, and it measures time.

2A • The crew room 📻 Track 8.1

Before you listen. Both of them are applying for the same promotion. Guess: which box is the biggest on the form?

Listen once. One question. How many years has Ruth been on the line?

Listen again. Complete the table.

	Ruth	the applicant
years lived abroad worked nights

Listen again. True or false?

1. The applicant has worked abroad. ☐ T ☐ F
2. Ruth has never worked nights. ☐ T ☐ F
3. The applicant has worked in four languages. ☐ T ☐ F
4. Ruth has done this job for twenty-three years. ☐ T ☐ F

Noticing. Four sentences from the recording.

1. Have you ever worked abroad?
2. I've never been out of the country.
3. I haven't done the test yet.
4. She's done this for twenty-three years.

None of these four says when. Why would you choose a tense that leaves the date out?

2B • Decoding clinic Track 8.2

Twenty seconds of the applicant at speed. Three jobs.

1. Count how many times you hear have, has or 've.
2. In I've and she's, how long is the have or has sound?
3. He says been and gone. Is the person back, in each one?

Part 3 • Grammar Lab 1 ♦ B • THE SYSTEM

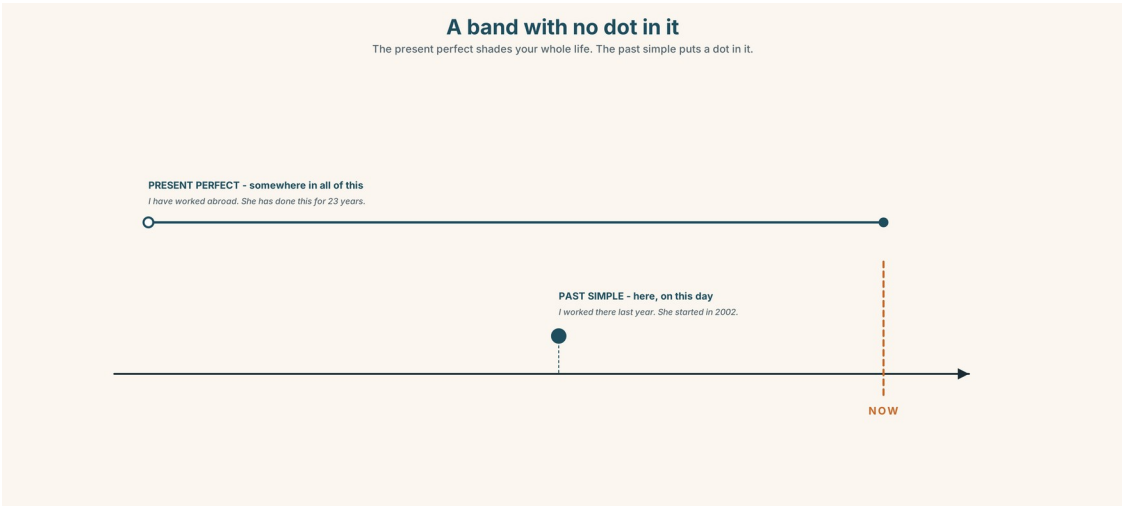

Saying it happened without saying when

3A • Notice

Look at the four sentences in Part 2 again.

1. What two parts make this form of the verb?
2. Does any of the four say when it happened?
3. Where does ever go? Where does never go?
4. What is the difference between I haven't done it and I didn't do it?

3B • See

{width=6.

6in}

A band with no dot in it — The present perfect shades your whole life. The past simple puts a dot in it.

3C • Know

experience	have / has + past participle	I have worked abroad. She has done this for 23 years. the question	Have you ever...?	Have you ever worked nights? never	one negative, already	I have never been out of the country.
not yet	it has not happened so far	I haven't done the test yet.

No date, ever. The moment you add a date — last year, in 2019, when I was twenty — you must change to the past simple. The present perfect and a date cannot stand in the same sentence.

{width=6.

6in}

Three kinds of participle, and one pair that matters — Been and gone are the same journey and they end in different places.

same as the past different

been or gone already / yet worked · lived · made · bought · had do → did → done · see → saw → seen · go → went → gone

She's been to Jasper — she is back · She's gone to Jasper — she is not already in positives, yet in negatives and questions

Why it matters. Every interview, every introduction and every conversation with somebody you have just met runs on this tense, and it is the first tense in this book that has no equivalent in most languages.

3D • Use — controlled

Complete with the present perfect, ever, never, already or yet.

(1) _____ you _____ (work) abroad? — No, I (2) _____ (be) out of the country. I (3) _____ (not do) the test _____. She (4) _____ (do) this job for twenty-three years. He (5) _____ (pass) the test — last month, in fact.

3E • Use — guided

Turn each one into a question with Have you ever...?, then answer it two ways.

1. work nights
2. drive a truck
3. live abroad
4. sing in front of people
5. lose something important

3F • Use — open

In pairs. Find five things your partner has done and you have not. Only Have you ever...? questions. You may not ask when.

3G • Check — six items, mark your own

1. _____ you ever _____ (work) abroad?
2. I've _____ been out of the country.
3. I _____ (not do) the test yet.
4. She _____ (do) this for twenty-three years.
5. × I have worked there last year. → correct it.
6. × Have you ever went to Jasper? → correct it.

A date on a tense that refuses dates

✗ I have worked there last year.

Diagram illustrating the error: A vertical line represents the present perfect tense 'have worked'. A horizontal line with a red dot represents the date 'last year'. The text 'last year - a date, and now the tense is wrong' is written above the horizontal line.

The present perfect says: somewhere in my life, and I am not telling you when. Adding a date contradicts the tense you have just chosen. English hears this as two different sentences stuck together, and it is one of the few errors that makes a listener stop and reparse.

✓ I worked there last year.

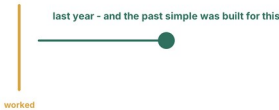

Diagram illustrating the correct usage: A vertical line represents the past simple tense 'worked'. A horizontal line with a green dot represents the date 'last year'. The text 'last year - and the past simple was built for this' is written above the horizontal line.

The moment a date appears, use the past simple. The rule is mechanical and it never fails: no date, present perfect; any date at all, past simple. This is also why a conversation always starts in one and moves into the other.

What the writer thought:

The present perfect has have in it, which looks present, and a past participle, which looks past - so it feels like a tense that can do both. It cannot. What it does is leave the time out on purpose, and a date puts it back in.

Part 4 • Speaking ◆ C • THE PERFORMANCE

4A • Fluency starter — find somebody who

Everybody writes one Have you ever...? question. Ask until you find somebody who says yes. You may not ask the same person twice.

4B • The functional core — talking about experience

Two interviews for one job

The left asks about years. The right asks what the person has done.

"Two years." — 4 minutes · one number have you ever?

4 languages · 11 weeks alone · twice at 02.00 — 9 minutes

Find the six. One of the two found out that the candidate had run a kitchen alone for eleven weeks. Which, and what did it cost in minutes?

Information gap. Learner A has what the application form asks. Learner B has what the job actually requires. Find the three requirements the form cannot see.

4C • The performance — three things not on the form

Interview a classmate and find three things they have done that no form would ask about. Three minutes. You must:

ask six Have you ever...? questions · follow one of them into the past simple · find one thing nobody else in the room has done

Report in three sentences. Record it.

4D • Observer

One person listens for one thing: did anybody put a date in a present perfect sentence?

4E • Two criteria

☐ Were all my experience questions in the present perfect? ☐ Did I switch to the past simple the moment I asked when?

Part 5 • Reading A • THE WORLD

5A • Predict

The title is "Years of experience: ____" Why do you think there is a blank in the title?

5B • Read — sixty seconds

Years of experience: ____

The application form has one box about experience. It says: YEARS OF EXPERIENCE. There is a line after it.

Ruth has written 23. The other applicant has written 2 and then stopped writing.

He has worked two years on this line. He has also run a kitchen alone for eleven weeks when the chef left without notice, and he has worked in four languages, and he has twice talked somebody out of getting off a train in the middle of a prairie at two in the morning.

None of that is on the form. There is nowhere to put it. The form does not ask whether you have ever done anything; it asks how long you have been near it.

5F • Two texts

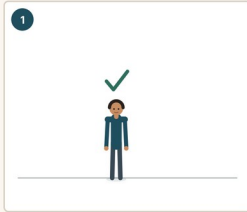

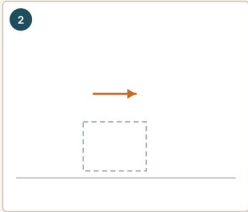

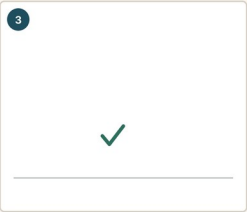

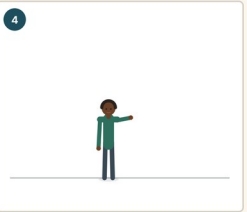

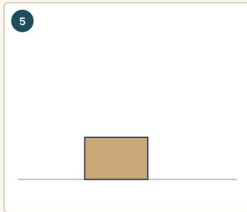

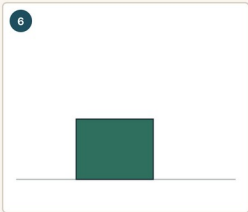

The reading says one applicant has run a kitchen alone for eleven weeks. The form has four unscored lines for anything that is not a date.

Where would that go? Say one sentence.

The have that is almost not there — Written in full above, said below. In two of these the word disappears completely.

7A • Hear

I have → I've, one sound · he has → he's · you have → you've have you → hav-yuh, and the h almost goes · has she → uz-shee In a statement, have is never stressed. If it is, you are arguing.

7B • Say

Say each one three times. Then say this:

I've never been there, and he's already gone. — two perfects, four beats.

7C • Make it mean something

Say these two:

I've done it. — ordinary. Have has almost no sound at all. I HAVE done it. — you are contradicting somebody who said you had not.

The full form is an argument. Learners who always use the full form sound permanently defensive. Which one would you use to answer a friendly question?

7D • Fluency 20

Twenty seconds: six things you have done in your life, no dates. Three times, faster.

Part 8 • Writing C • THE PERFORMANCE

What you have done • 50–70 words

8A • Read the model

I have worked on this line for two years. [the number the form asks for, got out of the way]

I have also run a kitchen alone for eleven weeks, when the chef left without notice. [the thing the form does not ask about, with the reason it happened]

I have worked in four languages and I have twice talked somebody out of getting off a train at two in the morning. [two more, and the second one is specific]

I have never managed anybody. That is the only thing on this list I have not done. [the honest gap, volunteered]

Questions about the writer's choices:

1. The first line gives the number. Why get it out of the way first?
2. at two in the morning. Why is the detail the whole sentence?
3. The last line admits a gap nobody asked about. What does that buy?

8B • The anti-model

I have two years of experience on this line. I am hard-working and reliable. I have good communication skills. I work well in a team. I am looking for a new challenge.

Correct English, and it is on nine million applications. Rewrite it with three things that have actually happened and one thing you have never done.

8C • Plan

the number they asked for → the thing they did not ask about → two more, one of them specific → the honest gap

8D • Write — 50 to 70 words

8E • Peer review — two things only

What is missing	a list, because nobody ever told anyone to keep one

9B • Your firsts

Write five sentences beginning I have... about English. No dates. First time you understood a film, were understood by a stranger, read a page without stopping, made somebody laugh, had an argument.

9C • Role play — the interview nobody gives

In pairs. Interview your partner about their English with ten Have you ever...? questions. No question may be about a course, a level or a score.

9D • The one you have not done yet

Look at your list of firsts. Name the next one. Write it as I haven't ... yet. That sentence is a plan with a date you have not set.

9E • Transfer — before next week

Keep a list of English firsts for seven days. However small. Bring it. Most people find three or four and are surprised by all of them.

Part 10 • Mediation & Interaction ♦ C • THE PERFORMANCE

10D • Your language

Does your language have a tense for experience without a date? Say I have been to Canada in your language. Does it sound like the past, or like now?

Part 11 • The Decision ◆ C • THE PERFORMANCE

One box on a form

The company promotes about nine sleeping-car attendants a year. The form has one experience box and it asks for years.

Option one: keep it. Years are cheap to check and impossible to argue with.

Option two: replace it with a checklist of twelve things — have you ever run a service alone, have you ever dealt with a medical event, have you ever worked in a language that is not your first. Takes four minutes to fill in and two hours a year to score.

Option three: a day's trial on a real train. Expensive, accurate, and it cannot be done for more than about thirty people a year.

11E • The Reveal

What happened. The company introduced the twelve-item checklist. In the first year the promotions went to almost the same nine people.

Then something nobody expected: the checklist was being read by the people filling it in. Four attendants asked to be put on night services specifically because there was a line on the form about them, and the company had never once been asked that before.

One question. You do not have to answer it out loud.

The checklist did not change who was promoted. What did it change?

Unit 9 • How does weather change a day?

A1.2 • Unit 9 • Forty Below

English Animated • Getting Around • The Prairie Line, Toronto to Vancouver Student's Book

Part 0 • The Big Picture ♦ A • THE WORLD

{width=6.

6in}

The prairie, ten past eight in January, minus thirty-eight — Fourteen things to find. One of the four came out for forty seconds and it has been nine minutes.

How does weather change a day?

By the end of this unit you can make a plan, change it, and say what it depends on.

◆ A • THE WORLD	A place where the weather is not a topic of conversation but a timetable
◆ B • THE SYSTEM	be going to · the present continuous for arrangements · against will · 22 words for weather · going to as one word
◆ C • THE PERFORMANCE	You make a plan with somebody and change it twice

Find these in the picture. Write the number.

☐ snow ☐ ice ☐ the sun ☐ a cloud ☐ the sky ☐ the wind ☐ a track ☐ a train ☐ a coat ☐ a window ☐ a door ☐ a light ☐ a bag ☐ a step

Three of these words are not in the picture. Which three?

rain · a storm · spring

0B • Guess it

Look at the four people beside the train. Which one came out for forty seconds? Say one thing. You can use these words:

cold · coat · wait · stand · nine

0C • Say it

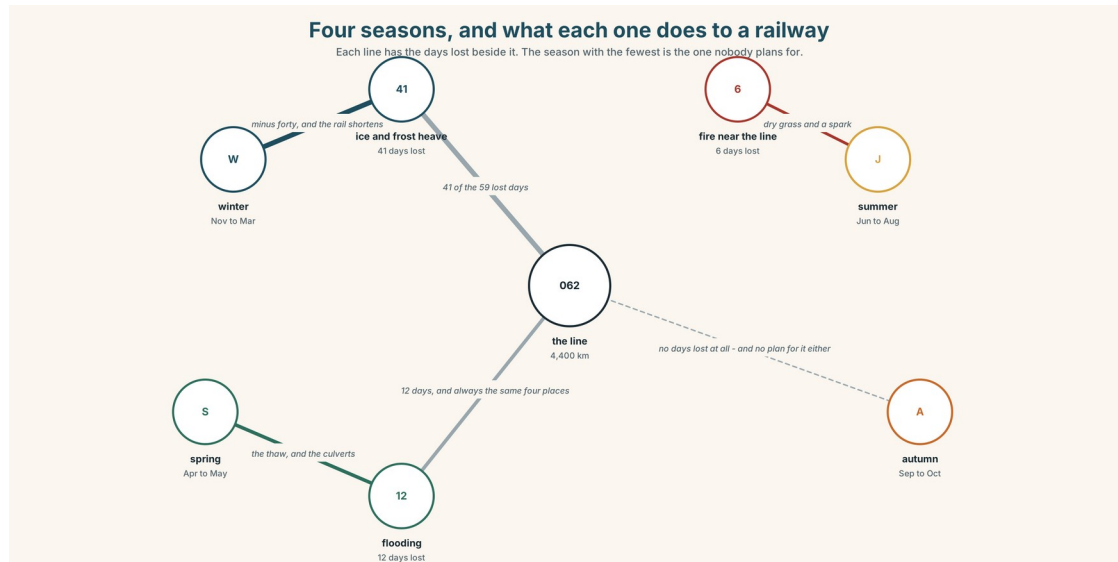

Record. Thirty seconds. Do not prepare.

What are you doing at the weekend, and what would change it?

Part 1 • Vocabulary Lab 1 ♦ B • THE SYSTEM

1A • Meet — a year on this line

{width=6.

Four seasons, and what each one does to a railway — Each line has the days lost beside it. The season with the fewest is the one nobody plans for.

weather

A word for all of it, and nobody here uses it alone.

forty below

Not a temperature here. A category, with its own rules.

season

Four names, and on this line there are really two.

check the forecast

Done by the crew four times a day in winter and never in July.

cancel a plan

What the weather does to you.

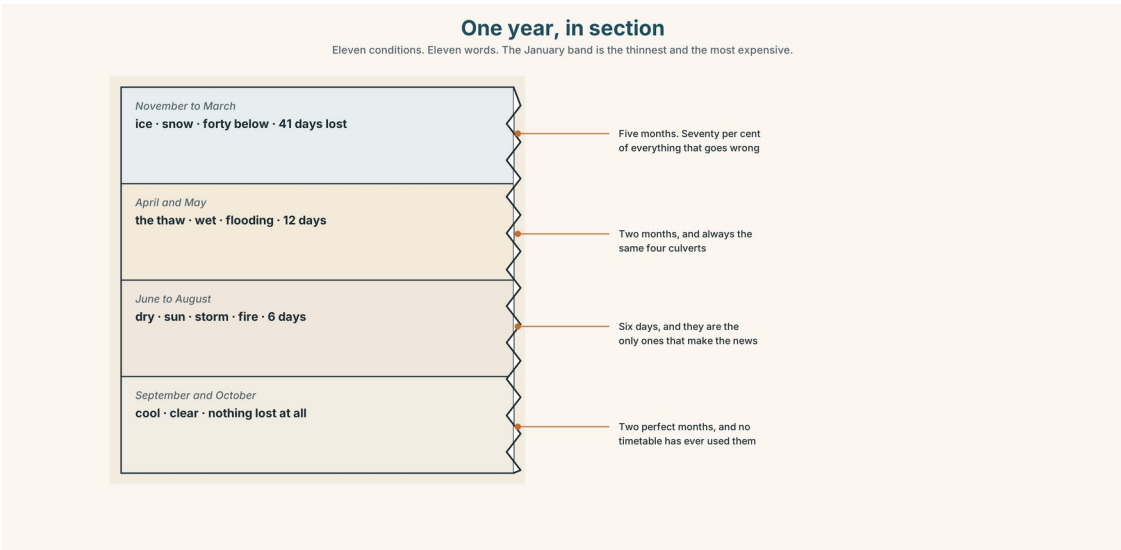

call off

What you do, before the weather does it for you.

One year, in section — Eleven conditions. Eleven words. The January band is the thinnest and the most expensive.

1C • Sort — the weather, or what it does to you?

Put each word in the right box. Two of them can go in both. Which two, and why?

wet · degrees · ice · sky · cloud · snow · cool · dry · storm · wind put off	Not gone. Moved. A completely different conversation.

a bit of rain	Three words that mean do not change anything .
forty below	Two words that mean change everything .

Now say them. Two of these six end a plan and one of them moves it. Which is which, and which two are not about plans at all?

1E • Stretch — the phrases you will need today

check the forecast · cancel a plan · put off · call off · a bit of rain

Match each phrase to the moment you need it.

1. It is Thursday and the thing is on Saturday. → _____
2. Somebody is suggesting you stay at home and you do not want to. → _____
3. The match is not happening and it will not happen later either. → _____
4. The match is not happening today and it is happening next Tuesday. → _____
5. You are the person who has to decide, and forty people are waiting. → _____

1F • The hard one

Noticing. Four sentences from the recording.

1. It's going to get colder.
2. We're leaving at six tomorrow.
3. I'll tell them.
4. I'm going to check again at four.

Sentences 1 and 4 both use going to and they are doing different jobs. What are they?2B • Decoding clinic Track 9.2

Twenty seconds of Tom at speed. Three jobs.

1. Count how many future forms you hear.
2. Going to is three syllables and he says it in one. Write what you hear.
3. He says we're leaving about something that has not happened. How can a present tense do that?

Part 3 • Grammar Lab 1 B • THE SYSTEM*Three futures, and how to choose*3A • Notice

Look at the four sentences in Part 2 again.

1. In sentence 1, what is the evidence for the prediction?
2. In sentence 4, when was the decision made?
3. In sentence 2, is there an arrangement, or only an intention?
4. In sentence 3, when was that decision made?

3B • See

{width=6.

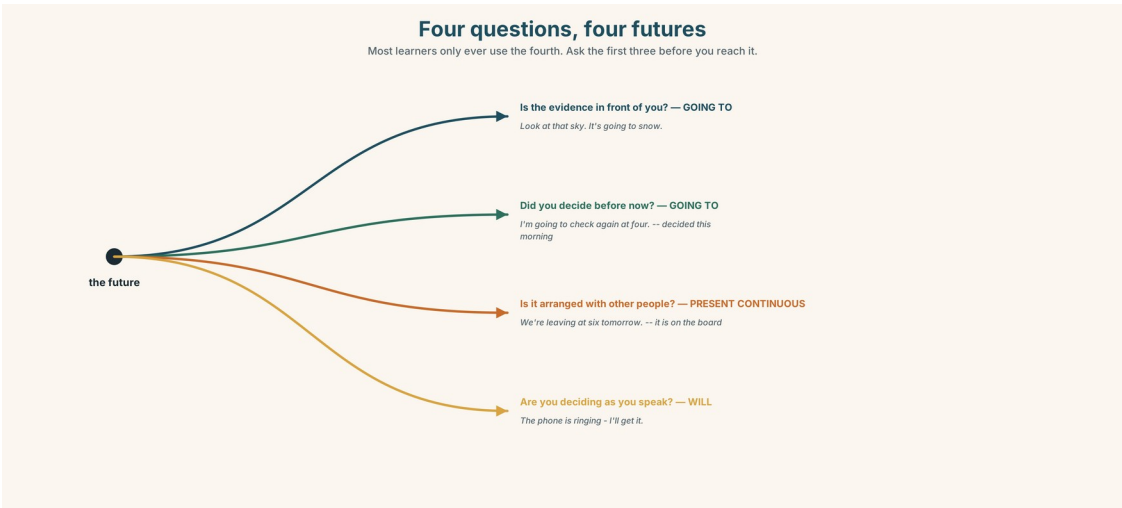

6in}

Three futures, three starting points — The arrow starts where the decision was made, not where the thing happens.

3C • Know

evidence now	be going to	It's going to get colder — look at the sky.
a decision already made	be going to	I'm going to check again at four.
an arrangement with others	present continuous	We're leaving at six tomorrow.
decided as you speak	will	I'll tell them.

The question is when the future was decided, not when it happens. All three of these can describe the same Saturday. What differs is how long the speaker has known.

{width=6.

6in}

Four questions, four futures — Most learners only ever use the fourth. Ask the first three before you reach it.

the form	am / is / are + going to + the plain verb
the negative	It isn't going to rain. We aren't leaving until six. the question	Is it going to rain? What are you doing at the weekend?
the conditions	It depends on the weather. · if it rains...

Why it matters. Almost everything anybody says about tomorrow is one of these three, and choosing the wrong one does not make you wrong — it makes you sound as if you decided just now.

3D • Use — controlled

Complete with going to, the present continuous, or will.

Look at that sky. It (1) _____ (snow). We (2) _____ (leave) at six tomorrow — it is on the board and the crew have been told. I (3) _____ (check) the forecast again at four. I decided this morning. The telephone is ringing. — Don't move, I (4) _____ (get) it. What (5) _____ you _____ (do) at the weekend?

3E • Use — guided

Choose the right future for each one and write the sentence.

1. There are black clouds and a wind getting up.
2. You and three colleagues have booked a table for Friday.
3. Somebody has just asked you for help with a bag.
4. You decided last week to take a course in the spring.
5. The train leaves at 06.10 and it is in the timetable.

3F • Use — open

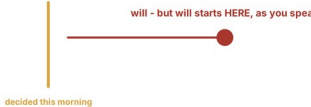

In pairs. Make a plan for Saturday together. Change it twice: once because of the weather and once because of a person. Every sentence must use one of the three futures.

3G • Check — six items, mark your own

1. Look at that sky. It _____ _____ _____ snow. (three words)
2. We _____ _____ at six tomorrow. (arranged, and on the board)
3. I _____ check again at four. (decided this morning — three words)
4. The phone is ringing — I _____ get it. (deciding now)
5. × I will check it again at four, I decided this morning. → correct it.
6. × It's going to rain, I think — no, look, it's raining already. → which future was wrong?

The decision arrow that started too late ✗ I'll check it again at four.

Will says the decision is being made right now. If you decided eight hours ago, the listener hears a sudden idea where there was a plan. Nothing is ungrammatical - what has happened is that you have made yourself sound unprepared.

✓ I'm going to check it again at four.

Going to reaches back to the moment of the decision, or to the evidence you can see. It is the ordinary future for anything you have thought about, which is most things, and it is the one learners use least.

What the writer thought:
Will is taught first and taught as THE future, so it becomes the default. In real speech going to and the present continuous between them do most of the work, and will is reserved for offers, promises and things decided mid-sentence.

4A • Fluency starter — the plan that keeps changing

One person states a plan. The next changes it because of the weather. The next changes it again because of a person. Round the room, and nobody may use a future form that has just been used.

4B • The functional core — making and changing plans

The same Saturday, planned twice
The left plan has a condition on every item. The right has none.

with conditions

if it rains · if the road is closed · if he can't come — still a day

no conditions

one plan · one road · one person — and it rained at 11.30

Find the six. The two plans are identical until half past eleven on Saturday morning. What happens then?

changing it	We're going to put it off. · They've called it off.

Information gap. Learner A has the forecast. Learner B has the plans for the weekend. Decide together what to cancel, what to put off and what to leave.

4C • The performance — the plan that changes twice use all three futures · attach one condition · change the plan once because of the weather and once because of a person · end by agreeing on something Record it.

Part 5 • Reading A • THE WORLD

5A • Predict

The title is "The timetable that tells the truth." What do you think is wrong with the one they have?

5B • Read — sixty seconds

The timetable that tells the truth

In July this train is late about four times in ten. In January it is late nine times in ten, and by an average of two hours and forty minutes.

The timetable is the same in both months.

The crew know this. Every winter they tell passengers at Winnipeg that the arrival time on their ticket is not going to happen, and every winter about a third of those passengers are angry, and all of that anger lands on a person standing in a corridor who did not write the timetable.

There is a second timetable. The crew have it. It is the real one, and it was made by a planner in 2011 who worked out the winter times from eleven years of data, and it has never been printed because printing it would be an admission.

The company is not going to print it. They have said so twice.

5C • Answer

1. How often is the train late in July?
2. How late is it on average in January?
3. Who tells the passengers?
4. When was the second timetable made?
5. Why has the real timetable never been printed?

are you going to	→	a y u g u n n a same again
want to	→	w a n n a the same shrinking going to Winnipeg	→	g o i n g t o W i n n i p e g before a place it keeps every syllable

{width=6.

Three syllables in one — Before a verb, going to always shrinks. Before a place name it never does.

7A • Hear

going to → gonna — and before a verb it is almost never said in full I'm going to → um-uh-nuh · are you going to → a-yuh-gunnuh Before a noun it does not shrink: I'm going to Winnipeg keeps all three syllables.

7B • Say

Say each one three times. Then say this:

I'm going to check the forecast, and then I'm going to Winnipeg. — one shrinks and one does not.

7C • Make it mean something

Say these two:

I'm gonna go. — a plan, and it sounds like speech I am going to go. — the same plan, and now you are being firm about it

The shrunken form is the normal one. Saying it in full is not more polite. Which one sounds like an argument?

7D • Fluency 20

Twenty seconds: six things you are going to do this month, with one condition each. Three times, faster.

Part 8 • Writing C • THE PERFORMANCE

A plan with a condition • 50–70 words

8A • Read the model

We're leaving on Saturday at six. The tickets are booked. [an arrangement, with the proof]

It's going to be cold — minus thirty on Friday night, and it doesn't warm up. [a prediction with evidence]

If the road is closed we're going to go on Sunday instead. We're not going to cancel it. [the condition, and what will be done — the difference between moving and cancelling]

I'll telephone you on Friday either way. [the decision made as the writer writes]

Questions about the writer's choices:

1. The tickets are booked. Why is the evidence more useful than the plan?
2. We're not going to cancel it. Why say what will not happen?
3. The last line uses a different future from the other three. Why?

8B • The anti-model

We will go on Saturday. We will leave at six. If the weather is bad we will decide later. I will call you.

Correct English, four futures, and all four are the wrong one. Rewrite it with one arrangement, one prediction with evidence, one condition, and one decision made as you write.

8C • Plan

the arrangement, with proof → the prediction, with evidence → the condition and what you will do → the decision made now

8D • Write — 50 to 70 words

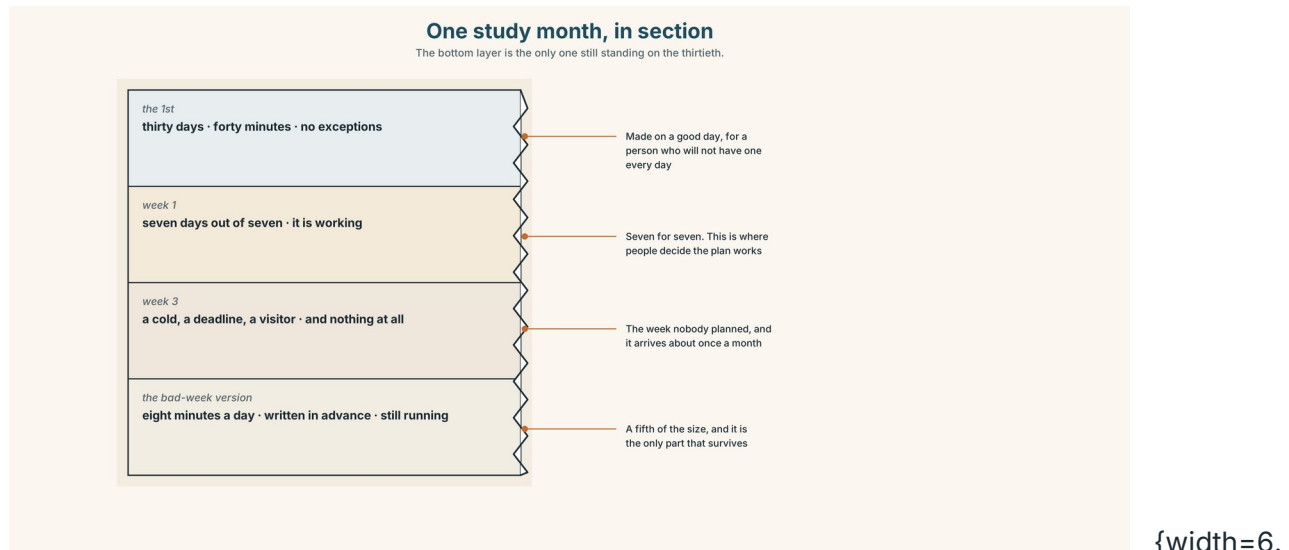

8E • Peer review — two things only

☐ Are at least two different futures used, and is each one right? ☐ Is there one condition, and does it say what happens if it is met?

8F • Publish

9B • Write the bad-week version

Take your study plan and write the version for the week when everything goes wrong. It should be about a fifth of the size and it must not be zero. That version is the plan.

9C • Role play — the forecast

In pairs. One of you describes next month. The other asks What are you going to do if...? four times, each time about something going wrong. No answer may be I don't know.

9D • Your forty below

Everybody has a condition under which they do nothing — illness, a deadline, a bad week. Name yours, and write the two minutes of English you could still do in it.

9E • Transfer — before next week

10A • Relay

10D • Your language

Does your language have different ways of talking about the future depending on when you decided? Say I'm going to call her and I'll call her in your language. Are they different?

Part 11 • The Decision ◆ C • THE PERFORMANCE

The timetable that tells the truth

In January the train is late nine times in ten, by an average of two hours forty. The printed timetable allows nothing for it.

Option one: print the real winter timetable. Passengers would arrive expecting the true time. The advertised journey becomes three hours longer and bookings would probably fall.

Option two: keep it. Ninety per cent of winter passengers are told at Winnipeg by a crew member, and about a third of them are angry at that crew member.

Option three: print both. Summer times in large type, winter times beneath them in the same size, and a line saying which months are which.

11A • The evidence

the printed time

 Track 9.6. Nadia, 20 seconds: "I tell about ninety people a week in January that their ticket is wrong. It is not wrong. It just isn't true. Somebody decided that it was better for me to say it than for the company to print it."

11B • Talk about it

In threes. Use the frame. Everybody says one.

I think the company should _____, because _____.

Words you can use: weather · snow · ice · winter · forecast · cancel a plan · put off

11C • Decide

Write two sentences. Choose, and say why.

I think the company should _____, because _____.

11D • Model decision

Print both, in the same size. The honest timetable costs bookings and the dishonest one costs a person in a corridor ninety conversations a week. Printing both costs a line of type, and it is the only one of the three in which nobody is asked to say something they do not believe.

11E • The Reveal

What happened. The company printed both. Winter bookings fell four per cent in the first year, which was less than anybody had predicted, and complaints at Vancouver fell by two thirds.

Then something nobody expected: the four per cent came back the following year and brought others. People had started booking the winter service on purpose, because a company that prints a three-hour delay is a company that tells you things.

One question. You do not have to answer it out loud.

They were protecting the bookings. What had they been spending to protect them?

Part 12 • Landing ◆ all three lines

12A • Recycle — twelve items

1. Look at that sky. It _____ snow. (three words)
2. We _____ at six tomorrow. (arranged)
3. The phone is ringing — I _____ get it. (deciding now)

What a story is made of after about a year.

ending

The part people change when they tell it the second time.

true

What people claim and what nobody checks.

the best thing

The question on the card.

the worst part

The question nobody asked, and about four hundred people answered it anyway.

1B • Meet — the words

best • worst • longest • shortest • hardest • easiest • strangest • favourite • amazing • boring
• interesting • funny • true • story • memory • ending

what happened

six hours · a man in seat 14 · a book not read the first telling four minutes · every detail · no ending yet

the tenth telling ninety seconds · one number · and now it has an ending

ten years later

two sentences · a person · a number · that is all

The only layer that is entirely true

Longest, and nobody retold it from this version

The ending was not there at the time. It was built in the retellings

A person and a number. Everything else has gone

PART OF THE STORY	IT BOTH

1D • What people say about stories

the best thing	The question on the card, and the one everybody answers.
the worst part	Four hundred people wrote this without being asked.
a true story	Three words that are never said about a story that is only true.
at the end	Where the second telling changes.
turn out	The verb for an ending nobody predicted.
end up	The verb for being somewhere you did not plan to be.

Now say them. Two of these six are about where you finish and two are about what you thought. Which is which, and which of the six is a warning?

1E • Stretch — the phrases you will need today

the best thing · the worst part · a true story · turn out · end up

Match each phrase to the moment you need it.

1. You are about to tell something nobody will believe. → _____
2. Somebody asks you to sum up a week. → _____
3. The thing you were dreading was not the thing that went wrong. → _____
4. You went out for twenty minutes and came home at two. → _____
5. It was not what anybody expected, including you. → _____

2. The newest box has no year on it. ☐ T ☐ F
3. There is enough time to read them all. ☐ T ☐ F
4. Eleven hundred of the cards are stories. ☐ T ☐ F

Noticing. Four sentences from the recording.

1. It's the strangest thing in the box.
2. That's the best part.
3. There isn't enough time.
4. It's too long to read.

Sentences 3 and 4 both say there is a problem of amount. What is the difference between too and not enough?

2B • Decoding clinic Track 10.2

Part 3 • Grammar Lab 1 B • THE SYSTEM

The end of the scale

3A • Notice

Look at the four sentences in Part 2 again.

1. In sentence 1, what is on the end of the adjective, and what is in front of it?
2. Why is best not goodest?
3. In sentence 3, what kind of word comes after enough?
4. In sentence 4, what is too saying about the amount?

6in}

3C • Know

Too and enough are not opposites. Too means more than you want. Not enough means less than you need. Both describe a mismatch, from opposite sides, and enough goes after an adjective and before a noun: long enough, enough time.

{width=6.
```

Too much, enough, and not enough — Enough goes after an adjective and before a noun. Nothing else in English does this.

before a noun	enough time · enough cards · not enough people
after an adjective	long enough · good enough · old enough
too + adjective	too long · too expensive · too late
softening a superlative	one of the best · almost the longest · nearly the worst

Why it matters. Every opinion anybody gives about anything lands somewhere on this scale, and the two most common sentences in any review are it was the best and it was too long.

3D • Use — controlled

Complete with the superlative, too or enough.

It's (1) _____ (strange) thing in the box. That's (2) _____ (good) part. There isn't (3) _____ time to read them all. It's (4) _____ long — four thousand cards. It is (5) _____ (interesting) document the company owns and nobody has opened it.

3E • Use — guided

Make a superlative sentence, then say why with too or enough.

1. the longest journey you have made
2. the worst weather you have been out in
3. the most interesting place you have been
4. the hardest thing about English
5. the strangest thing you have kept

3F • Use — open

In pairs. Agree on the best, the worst and the strangest thing about this course. You must agree on all three. Use too or enough at least twice.

3G • Check — six items, mark your own

1. It's _____ _____ thing in the box. (two words — strange)
2. That's _____ _____ part. (two words — good)
3. There isn't _____ time.
4. It's _____ long to read.
5. × It's the most strangest thing. → correct it.
6. × It isn't enough long. → correct it.

The end of the scale, marked twice

the most

strangest - and it is already superlative

You met this exact error in Unit 3 as more cheaper. Strange is one syllable plus one, so it takes -est, and once it has taken it the word is already at the end of the scale. The most says the same thing again, and a scale has only one end.

✓ It's the strangest thing.

strangest - one marker, and the is still required

One superlative marker, chosen by the length of the adjective, and the in front of it every time. The is not optional: there is only one strangest thing in the box, and the says so.

What the writer thought:
The most feels like an intensifier, the way more did. It is not. It is the superlative itself. The test is the same as in Unit 3: if the adjective has changed shape, do not put a word in front of it.

5A • Predict

The title is "Eleven hundred of them are stories." What were the cards supposed to collect?

5B • Read — sixty seconds

Eleven hundred of them are stories

For eleven years the company has put a card on every table in the dining car. It says: The best thing about your journey? and gives four lines.

Four thousand one hundred cards have come back. They are in nine boxes in a storeroom at Toronto Union. Nobody has read them.

The company expected complaints. It planned for complaints; there is a process for a complaint and a person whose job it is. There are two hundred and ten complaints in the boxes, and all two hundred and ten were answered, because they arrived by another route as well.

Eleven hundred of the cards are stories. People wrote about the person they sat next to. About nine hundred mention another passenger by description, and about four hundred mention one by name.

5F • Two texts

The card asks for the best thing about the journey. Eleven hundred people wrote about another passenger.

● that's ● THE ● best ● part	the one and only best part
● that's ● the ● BEST ● part	not just good. Best

Which word you push — The same four words, five times. Each push answers a different question.

7A • Hear

That's the best part. — push that's: not the other bit, this bit push best: not just good — best push part: and there is more of it coming

7B • Say

Say the sentence five times, pushing a different word each time. Then say this:

It's not the longest story in the box — it's the strangest. — two pushes, and the second one is the point.

7C • Make it mean something

Say these two:

It's a TRUE story. — and you are defending it against doubt It's a true STORY. — and you are saying it is a story, not a report

Same four words. The push decides which word is being argued about. Which one would you say to somebody who did not believe you?

7D • Fluency 20

Twenty seconds: six superlatives about this year, each with a reason. Three times, faster.

Part 8 • Writing C • THE PERFORMANCE

A story on four lines • 50–70 words

8A • Read the model

The best thing was the man in seat 14. [the answer to the question, in nine words]

He got on at Winnipeg and he talked for six hours, and I had wanted to read. [the fact, and the honest resistance]

He had worked on this line for thirty-one years. He knew the name of every bridge. [the reason it turned out differently]

I didn't read any of my book. That is the best part. [the ending, and it contradicts the second line]

Questions about the writer's choices:

1. I had wanted to read. Why admit resistance in a card about the best thing?
2. He knew the name of every bridge. Why that detail and not he was interesting?
3. The last line repeats the phrase from the card. What does that do?

8B • The anti-model

The best thing was the scenery. It was amazing. The staff were very friendly and helpful. It was the most beautiful journey I have ever made. Thank you.

Correct English, entirely true, and there are nine hundred of these in the boxes and nobody can tell them apart. Rewrite it with one person, one number and one thing that went wrong first.

8C • Plan

the answer, short → the fact and your resistance → the detail that changed it → the ending, contradicting the second line

8D • Write — 50 to 70 words

8E • Peer review — two things only

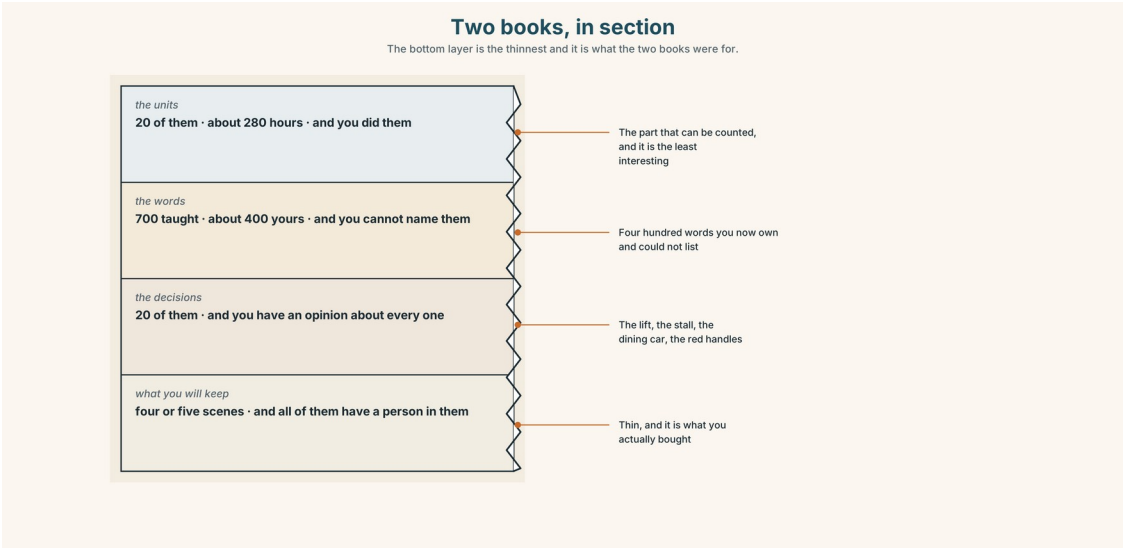

☐ Is there one number and one person in it? ☐ Could somebody retell it from memory tomorrow?

8F • Publish

What you can measure	four recordings, made months apart
What you cannot	the moment you stopped translating,

What you keep

9B • Listen to all four

You recorded thirty seconds in A1.1 Unit 1, Unit 9 and Unit 10, and in Unit 6 of this book. Play all four in order, now. Write down three differences. Not better. What.

9C • Role play — the handover

In pairs. One of you is starting A1.1 tomorrow. The other has just finished A1.2. Tell them the three things that are actually true about the next year. No encouragement.

9D • The best part

Write one sentence beginning The best thing about this year was... It must have a person or a number in it. Those are the only two things that survive.

9E • Transfer — before A2.1

Record thirty seconds answering: What can you do in English now? Keep all five recordings together in one place. You will use them again at the end of A2.

Part 10 • Mediation & Interaction ♦ C • THE PERFORMANCE

10B • Simplify — for one person

The marketing manager asks: What is actually in those boxes? Answer in four sentences. He has eleven minutes and a report due on Friday.

10C • Online

Write one message to a classmate about the best and worst thing in this course. Three sentences. Two superlatives and one too or enough.

10D • Your language

Does your language mark the end of a scale with an ending, or with a separate word? Say the longest and the most interesting in your language. Is it the same method for both?

Part 11 • The Decision ◆ C • THE PERFORMANCE

Four thousand one hundred cards

Nine boxes. Four thousand one hundred cards. Eleven years. Nobody has read them.

Option one: recycle them. They are eleven years old, the oldest are illegible, and nobody has missed them.

Option two: read a sample of four hundred and write a report. Costs about three weeks of one person's time and produces a document that will be read by six people.

Option three: type up the eleven hundred stories and put them on the website, with the writers' permission where there is a name. Costs about four months and nobody can say in advance what it is for.

 Track 10.6. Nadia, 20 seconds: "I read about forty of them once, waiting for a train. The best one was from 2016 and it was about a man who talked for six hours. I have told that story about nine times. I have never told anybody what was in the report."

11B • Talk about it

In threes. Use the frame. Everybody says one.

I think the company should _____, because _____.

Words you can use: story · memory · best · worst · amazing · boring · true

11C • Decide

Write two sentences. Choose, and say why.

I think the company should _____, because _____.

11D • Model decision

Type up the eleven hundred stories. The report will tell the company what it already believes. The stories will tell it what it is selling, and it has been wrong about that for eleven years. Four months is nothing against eleven years of being wrong.

11E • The Reveal

What happened. The company typed up eleven hundred stories and put one a day on a screen in the dining car. Nothing measurable changed for six months.

Then something nobody expected: passengers began writing cards about the cards on the screen. The number of cards returned went from about three hundred and seventy a year to nine hundred, and the new ones were longer.

One question. You do not have to answer it out loud.

They had four thousand one hundred cards and no idea what to do with them. What had they been missing for eleven years?

Part 12 • Landing all three lines

12A • Recycle — twelve items

1. It's _____ thing in the box. (two words — strange)
2. That's _____ part. (two words — good)
3. There isn't _____ time.
4. It's _____ long to read.
5. It isn't long _____. (after the adjective)
6. It's _____ story I've heard. (three words — amazing)
7. _____ the longest. (one word — not quite)
8. It _____ that he had worked here for thirty-one years. (two words)
9. We _____ talking for six hours. (two words — we did not plan to)
10. It's _____ . (three words — and nobody checks)
11. (Unit 9) It _____ snow. (three words — look at the sky)
12. (Unit 8) _____ you ever worked abroad?

12B • Consolidate — one task, everything in it

Write the story of this year in six sentences. Two superlatives, one too, one enough, one number, one person, and an ending that contradicts the beginning.

12C • Can-do, with evidence

☐ I can say what was the best, the worst and the strangest. Evidence: 4C, 8D ☐ I can form superlatives correctly. Evidence: 3G ☐ I can use too and enough in the right place.

A1.2 • Unit 1 • Nine Days In 0B • Guess it Because the shift has not ended. The train is four hours late, so everything he should have done between seven and eleven is still waiting to be done, and the only quiet place to do it is a dark dining car at two in the morning.

1C • Sort — the job, or how it felt?

HOW IT FELT — awful • calm • lucky PART OF THE JOB — crew • ticket • report • shift • mistake BOTH — busy • delay The two in both: busy and delay. A delay is a measured number of minutes and also a feeling in a corridor; busy is a description of a shift and of a person. Accept mistake in two columns if the learner argues that it is both an event and a judgement.

2A • Two in the morning 🎧 Track 1.1 1 F • 2 F • 3 T • 4 T Listen once — eleven at night, four hours late.

Order — 1 the freight train broke down • 2 the dining car closed at nine • 3 Dev woke Ruth and they made the sandwiches • 4 Nadia made the announcement at half past eleven.

2 is false: Nadia made it, not Dev.

Noticing — nothing was added to the end. The change is inside the word: leave → left, go → went, come → came, say → said. These are irregular verbs and the past is made by changing the word, not by adding to it.

3D • Use — controlled 1 left • 2 went • 3 was • 4 came • 5 said • 6 began • 7 became 3E • Use — guided 1 The train left at seven.

2 I went to the kitchen.

3 She came back with Ruth.

4 We began the shift at six.

5 Nobody said anything.

The form is the same after I, she, we and nobody. The past simple has no person endings at all.

3G • Check — six items, mark your own 1 left • 2 went • 3 came • 4 said • 5 We left at eleven. — leave is irregular • 6 He went to the kitchen. — go is irregular, and goed is not a word

5C • Answer 1 Four hours.

2 A freight train broke down eighty kilometres ahead.

3 Nine days.

4 Two hundred, in ninety minutes.

5 Because people who are told nothing assume the worst, and because the delay was already four hours old. Saying I do not know much is information; saying nothing is not.

6 It is true, and it is missing everything that happened. NO INCIDENTS means nothing went wrong, and the two hundred sandwiches, the announcement and the three letters are all things that went right — for which the form has no box.

5D · Vocabulary in context broke down — stopped working · stationary — not moving · she was not pleased — she was annoyed · between them — the two of them together · said it anyway — said it despite having little to say

5E · The counter-text 1 It left at 23.04 and it was scheduled for 19.00.

2 F3, meaning a freight movement. It records the cause and not the fault — the company has twenty-two codes and none of them names anybody.

3 NONE.

4 Nowhere. There is no field on the form for anything a passenger wrote, and the three letters went to a different department entirely.

5F · Two texts The log. It is in a database and it will be there in ten years; the sandwiches exist only in the memory of about a hundred and ninety-two people, and in nothing the company owns.

0B · Guess it The one with the smallest bag. A return journey is packed for a known number of nights; a single is packed for everything you own that you can carry. The heavy bags are the ones that are not coming back.

1C · Sort — the place, or the thing you carry?

PART OF THE STATION OR TRAIN — aisle · shelter · platform · window · seat SOMETHING YOU CARRY — suitcase · luggage · backpack BOTH — timetable · ticket The two in both: timetable and ticket. Both exist on the station wall and in your pocket. They are the only two objects in this unit that have to be in two places at once for the journey to work.

2A · The ticket window 🎧 Track 2.1 1 F · 2 T · 3 F · 4 T Listen once — about seven months. She last travelled in March.

Table — last journey: to Winnipeg, a return, seven months ago. This journey: to Vancouver, a single, today.

1 is false: a single. 3 is false: she travelled in March, not last summer.

Noticing — the past has moved onto did and didn't, so the verb goes back to its plain form. One past marker to a sentence, and when did is present it takes it.

3D · Use — controlled 1 bought · 2 didn't · 3 Did · 4 didn't · 5 came · 6 did 3E · Use — guided 1 She didn't book a return ticket. → Did she book a return ticket?

2 They didn't set off at six. → Did they set off at six?

3 He didn't miss the train. → Did he miss the train?

4 We didn't change at Winnipeg. → Did we change at Winnipeg?

5 The guard didn't wait. → Did the guard wait?

In every one the main verb loses its past form completely, including the irregular ones.

3G · Check — six items, mark your own 1 didn't · 2 Did · 3 did · 4 didn't · 5 Did you buy it? — did already carries the past · 6 I didn't go. — same rule, and go goes back to its plain form 5C · Answer 1 One thousand one hundred.

2 In 2009.

3 Thirty-one years.

4 Forty seconds.

5 Because nothing was announced and nothing was closed on any particular day. People left one at a time, each for a reason that was not about the town, and the sum of those reasons looks like a decision only afterwards.

6 Fifteen more people got on than got off, which means the town is still exporting people — and it is the only measurement of the town that anybody actually takes.

5D · Vocabulary in context a grain elevator — the tall building where grain is stored · for good — permanently · in a place like this — in a town of this kind · put down — let passengers off · the same thing — indistinguishable

5E · The counter-text 1 Two — Monday and Thursday.

2 Four. Two of the four westbound times are crossed out in pen, so the service has halved.

3 The fourth of November, with no year.

4 It was decided before the timetable was printed. A printed line is part of the design; a crossing-out in pen is a change made afterwards. So the winter request rule is older than the cuts.

5F · Two texts Several were. The four crossings-out are four decisions and the printed winter line is a fifth; what nobody ever made was a decision about the town, which is a different thing and would have had a name on it.

A1.2 · Unit 3 · One Thousand Four Hundred Seats

0B · Guess it The row that is not wrapped. Wear is the giveaway: the old row has arms rubbed pale where hands go and the new row is identical seat to seat. A thing that has been used stops being identical to the thing next to it.

1C · Sort — the thing, or what you think of it?

WHAT IT IS MADE OF — metal · plastic · cloth · wood WHAT YOU THINK OF IT — weak · quality · new · strong BOTH — cheap · price The two in both: cheap and price. A price is a fact and cheap is a judgement about the same number — and a cheap material is also, in ordinary speech, a kind of material. The word does both jobs and the listener has to decide which you meant.

2A · In the shed 🎧 Track 3.1 1 T · 2 F · 3 F · 4 T Listen once — nineteen dollars.

Table — cloth: $41, about seven years, repairable three or four times. Synthetic: $19, about three years, not repairable.

2 is false: cloth is the dearer of the two. 3 is false: when it tears it is finished.

Noticing — the length of the adjective. One syllable takes -er; three or more take more in front. Nothing about the meaning decides it.

3D · Use — controlled 1 cheaper · 2 stronger · 3 as · 4 as · 5 more · 6 than 3E · Use — guided 1 Cloth is more expensive than synthetic, but it lasts more than twice as long.

2 Metal is heavier than plastic and it lasts nearly four times as long.

3 The old seat has been repaired four times and the new one is already torn.

4 The train is much slower than the plane — four nights against five hours.

5 A return is dearer than a single, and it is not twice the price.

Accept any sentence with one comparative and than, as long as the two things are named.

3G · Check — six items, mark your own 1 cheaper · 2 stronger · 3 as ... as · 4 more · 5 It is cheaper than cloth. — not both more and -er · 6 It is cheaper than cloth. — the word is than, never that 5C · Answer 1 Forty-one dollars.

2 About three years.

3 Fourteen hundred.

4 Eighty-six thousand for cloth and eighty-nine for synthetic.

5 Because three thousand dollars on a decision worth around ninety thousand is about three per cent, which is inside the error of every assumption in the calculation.

6 It means the decision will be made by whoever is accountable for this year, not by whoever will pay in year four — so the money is not deciding it, the calendar is.

5D · Vocabulary in context it can be repaired — it is possible to mend it · once and a half — one and a half times · leaves in one year — is all spent in a single year · in four pieces — in four separate payments · signs for it — authorises the spending 5E · The counter-text 1 Forty-one dollars for cloth, nineteen for synthetic.

2 Six of the eight favour synthetic: price, weight, cleaning time, stain resistance, colours and delivery.

3 SERVICE LIFE and REPAIRABLE.

4 Three years, and no. They are missing because they are the only two rows on which synthetic loses, and because a blank is not a lie.

5F · Two texts Yes. Thirty thousand is the saving on this order and three thousand is the extra cost over ten years, and the sheet simply stops counting at the moment synthetic is ahead.

A1.2 • Unit 4 • Two Adults and Three Children

0B • Guess it Open answers. The strongest ones work from behaviour rather than faces: who has put a coat over whom, who is holding whose bag, who has not spoken since Winnipeg. Two people who look alike may be strangers; two people who share luggage are not.

1C • Sort — the person, or the connection?

A PERSON — cousin · mother · husband · brother · aunt · daughter A SITUATION — alone · married · together BOTH — family Family is both: a set of people and a situation you are in. Accept married in two columns as well if the learner points out that a married couple describes people. The useful observation is that six of these ten words are positions in a diagram and the other four are states.

2A • Coach 6, half past eight 🗣️ Track 4.1 1 F · 2 T · 3 T · 4 F Listen once — his sister's.

Table — the woman in seat 14: a stranger, who lent him a coat. The man with the coat: nobody, and the coat is hers. The person he is going to: his aunt, who brought him up.

1 is false: it is his sister's. 4 is false: he is travelling alone.

Noticing — my has to hold a noun and mine refuses one. It's not my stops where the noun should be, and the listener waits for it.

3D • Use — controlled 1 mine · 2 's · 3 's · 4 his · 5 theirs · 6 ours

3E • Use — guided 1 Sam's bag.

2 Mine.

3 Ours.

4 The guard's keys.

5 My sister's children.

The apostrophe always attaches to the owner, never to the thing. In 2 and 3 there is no noun at all, so the standing-alone form is the only option.

3G • Check — six items, mark your own 1 mine · 2 's · 3 hers · 4 Whose · 5 It's not mine. — my cannot end a sentence · 6 That is Sam's bag. — people take 's, not of 5C • Answer 1 Two adults and up to three children travelling together, for the price of two adults.

2 Eleven.

3 Because the fare covers five people and there were six.

4 Seventeen.

5 Because she is one adult, not two. The fare is written for a shape of family that she is not in, and the children are not the problem — the missing second adult is.

6 It is paying for a number of bodies in a particular arrangement, and not for care. Three of the four bookings were doing care work and paid full fare; the one that got the discount had the most adults in it.

5D • Vocabulary in context travelling together — making the journey as one group · between them — the two of them combined · they split it — they shared the cost · cannot travel alone — needs somebody with her · looking after — caring for 5E • The counter-text 1 Two adults and up to three children.

2 Two to fifteen inclusive, because under-twos travel free and sixteen counts as an adult. The two ages are the two places the price changes.

3 "Proof of relationship may be requested."

4 Because defining it would mean choosing, in writing, whose household counts — and that choice is then the company's. Leaving it undefined moves the decision to whoever is at the counter, where it is made ninety times a day and never recorded.

5F · Two texts All four are families and only one fits the sentence, which tells you the sentence is a description of a price and not of a family.

A1.2 · Unit 5 · Is There a Doctor on Board?

0B · Guess it Years. A rubber mat wears in months; the floor under it wears in decades, and it is worn in the shape of two feet because the galley is two metres wide and there is only one place to stand. Twenty-three years, and the floor is the only record of it.

1C · Sort — the body, or the advice?

SOMETHING YOU DO ABOUT IT — exercise · medicine · water SOMETHING THE BODY HAS — cold · sick · pain · headache · cough BOTH — rest · stress The two in both: rest and stress. Rest is a thing the body needs and a thing you do; stress is a state the body is in and, in a working life, a thing that is done to it. Both are also nouns and verbs with no change of form.

2A · Quarter past five 🎧 Track 5.1 1 F · 2 T · 3 F · 4 T Listen once — her back.

Table — the pain: she says it is nothing; Nadia says sit down. The hours: she says she has four hundred breakfasts; Nadia says do not lift that. The doctor: she has not seen one; Nadia suggests Winnipeg.

1 is false: she has not. 3 is false: there is nobody on board.

Noticing — 1, 2 and 3 are advice; 4 is a promise. The hardest to say is 3, because a question invites a refusal and the other two do not.

3D · Use — controlled 1 should · 2 shouldn't · 3 Why don't you · 4 shouldn't work · 5 should · 6 should rest

3E · Use — guided 1 You should take something for it. / Why don't you take something for it?
2 You should see a doctor. / Why don't you see a doctor?
3 You should keep a bottle on the counter. / Why don't you keep a bottle on the counter?
4 You shouldn't carry those alone. / Why don't you ask somebody to help?
5 You should take a day. / Why don't you take Thursday?

The Why don't you version is gentler every time, and in 4 and 5 it is also more specific, which is what makes it easier to act on.

3G · Check — six items, mark your own 1 should · 2 shouldn't · 3 Why don't you · 4 should · 5 You should sit down. — nothing comes between a helper and its verb · 6 She should rest. — should never takes an s

5C · Answer 1 Four nights.

2 Eleven hours.

3 Bandages, a blanket and a list of telephone numbers.

4 Thirty times out of forty-one.

5 Because the eleven are the rare case and the announcement happens every time. The part that is hard forty-one times a year is not the medicine; it is speaking to a hundred and ninety-two frightened people.

6 Making an announcement that does not frighten people, and dealing with a medical event. The first is harder, because it happens every time and because nobody thinks of it as a skill.

5D · Vocabulary in context at its furthest point — where it is most distant · a padlock — a lock you put on and take off · answered — came forward in response · the worst part — the hardest element · in a voice that — speaking in a way that 5E · The counter-text 1 Nine.

2 The ice pack and the glucose gel. The ice pack is for an injury; the glucose gel is the one item on the list for a medical emergency rather than a cut.

3 Nineteen months ago.

4 Advice. It gets you a person in Toronto telling you what to do, which is worth something — and the train is still eleven hours from anybody who can do it.

5F · Two texts The announcement. The telephone number is the system on paper and the announcement is the system that runs forty-one times a year, and nobody has ever been trained in the second one.

A1.2 · Unit 6 · The Dining Car in 2035

0B · Guess it The one where nobody is looking at a phone. Four strangers who arrived separately and are still at the table an hour later have been talking longest, because nothing else is keeping them there.

1C · Sort — the thing, or what happens to it?

A THING — machine · car · robot · city · energy SOMETHING THAT HAPPENS — disappear · replace · grow · improve BOTH — change Change is both, with no change of form at all: a change and to change. Accept energy in two columns if the learner notices that it is a thing you buy and a property something has. English is unusually willing to let a noun become a verb untouched, and this is why.

2A · After the second sitting 📻 Track 6.1 1 T · 2 F · 3 T · 4 F Listen once — 2035.

Table — the engine: electric, 96 per cent. The dining car: replaced by a machine, 70 per cent. The crew: six to four, 74 per cent.

2 is false: he says probably, about seventy per cent. 4 is false: they do not.

Noticing — 1 is a prediction, 2 is an offer, 3 is a decision made at that second, and 4 is a prediction with a doubt in it. The word will is identical in all four and only the situation distinguishes them.

3D · Use — controlled 1 will · 2 will probably · 3 'll · 4 Maybe · 5 Will · 6 won't 3E · Use — guided 1 The dining car will probably close.

2 The crew will certainly get smaller — the plan is costed.
3 Trains will definitely get faster.
4 Maybe the route will stay the same.
5 I don't think people will stop booking.

Accept any certainty word in the right position: probably and definitely after will, maybe and perhaps at the front.

3G · Check — six items, mark your own 1 will · 2 'll · 3 won't · 4 probably · 5 The engine will be electric. — nothing between a helper and its verb · 6 She will come tomorrow. — will never takes an s

5C · Answer 1 About four hundred thousand dollars a year.
2 Why people chose this train instead of flying.
3 Sixty-one per cent.
4 A machine that sells sandwiches.
5 Because the sandwiches really will be fresher, always available, and nobody will wait forty minutes for a table. The plan is not wrong about what it measures.
6 Because the thing being removed is not a food service. The finance argument is about a cost centre and table nine is the product, and the two have never been in the same document.

5D · Vocabulary in context head office — the company's central administration · surveys passengers — asks them questions systematically · a different document — not the one being quoted · always be available — obtainable at any time · exchange addresses — give each other contact details

5E · The counter-text 1 Five.
2 The dining car replacement, at seventy per cent.
3 One point seven million dollars a year.
4 "Reputational." Open answers for the replacement: the strongest ones name the sixty-one per cent and say what would happen to bookings. One word is not enough because a risk without a number cannot be weighed against savings that have four.

5F · Two texts Yes, and that is the problem: the service will improve on every measure the plan uses, and the reason people book will not be among them.

6C · Chunk 1 probably · 2 Maybe · 3 think · 4 don't think · 5 We'll see · 6 Who knows

A1.2 • Unit 7 • Twenty-Two Red Handles

0B • Guess it The one about the law. It is the only one that was not the company's to put up or take down, so nobody has ever had the authority to replace it — which is also why it is the most faded and the highest on the wall.

1C • Sort — the thing, or the rule about it?

A RULE OR A STATUS — illegal · safety · legal · allowed BOTH — warning · speed A THING YOU CAN SEE — exit · seatbelt · helmet · licence The two in both: speed and warning. A speed is a number you can read off a dial and also a limit somebody set; a warning is a sign you can see and the act of warning. Both are the thing and the rule about the thing at once.

2A • In the vestibule 🗣️ Track 7.1 1 F · 2 T · 3 T · 4 F Listen once — breakable covers.

Table — the crew: must check them every trip; mustn't lock the box; don't have to sign the form. The passengers: must not touch it except in an emergency; mustn't block it; don't have to report a near miss.

1 is false: they may, in an emergency — that is what it is for. 4 is false: it is a proposal.

Noticing — sentence 3 says it is not necessary. It gives permission not to do something, which is the opposite of forbidding it.

3D • Use — controlled 1 mustn't · 2 have to · 3 don't have to · 4 has to · 5 must

3E • Use — guided 1 Compulsory — You have to wear a seatbelt. (the law, in most countries)

2 Forbidden — You mustn't touch the emergency handle, except in an emergency.

3 Not necessary — You don't have to sign the visitor book.

4 Compulsory — You have to carry a licence when you drive.

5 Not necessary — You don't have to arrive an hour early.

Note that 1 and 4 both come from outside the speaker, which is why have to fits them better than must.

3G • Check — six items, mark your own 1 mustn't · 2 have to · 3 don't have to · 4 has to · 5 You mustn't touch it. — don't must does not exist · 6 She must wear a helmet. — no to after must

5C • Answer 1 Twenty-two.

2 Four.

3 About fifty minutes.

4 A man in car 7 had a seizure and a passenger pulled the handle; the crew came and he is alive.

5 Because probably is the honest word and the writer will not round it up. Eight seconds did not matter that night as far as anybody can tell, and nobody can tell for certain.

6 Open answers. The strongest ones notice that the three mistakes are cheap and countable and the fourth is neither, and that a decision made only on countable things will always choose the covers.

5D • Vocabulary in context leaned on one — rested their weight against it · the length of it — from one end to the other · the nearest crew member — the closest one · breakable covers — covers designed to break · would not have mattered — would have made no difference

5E • The counter-text 1 Four.

2 A fine of up to five hundred dollars, in twenty-four point — the largest type on the notice.

3 2011.

4 It was written for the company, not for the passenger. The largest line protects the company from improper use and the smallest line is the one a frightened person needs in the two seconds they have.

5F · Two texts No. Nobody reads four numbered instructions and a penalty line while somebody is having a seizure — which is exactly why the one line that matters should not be the smallest one on the page.

A1.2 · Unit 8 · Twenty-Three Years and Two

0B · Guess it The one with two years. A small number in a box headed YEARS OF EXPERIENCE looks like an answer that is going to lose, so the pen stops while the person works out whether there is anywhere else on the page to put the rest.

1C · Sort — the thing, or the doing of it?

BOTH — cook · win A THING YOU HAVE — adventure · experience · language · moment · skill A THING YOU DO — climb · drive · swim The two in both: win and cook. A cook is a person and to cook is an action; a win is a result and to win is a verb. Note that experience is the only word on this list that is uncountable in one sense and countable in another: she has experience and an experience.

2A · The crew room 📻 Track 8.1 1 F · 2 F · 3 T · 4 T Listen once — twenty-three.

Table — Ruth: 23 years, never abroad, worked nights for most of them. The applicant: 2 years, never been out of the country, has worked nights.

1 is false: he has never been out of the country. 2 is false: she has.

Noticing — because the date does not matter and sometimes because you cannot remember it. A tense that leaves the time out lets you say what you have done without having to defend when.

3D · Use — controlled 1 Have ... worked · 2 have never been · 3 haven't done ... yet · 4 has done · 5 passed 3E · Use — guided 1 Have you ever worked nights? — Yes, a few times. / No, never.

2 Have you ever driven a truck? — Yes, once. / No, not yet.
3 Have you ever lived abroad? — Yes, for a year. / No, I've never been out of the country.
4 Have you ever sung in front of people? — Yes, only once. / No, and I never will.
5 Have you ever lost something important? — Yes. / Not yet.

Note that Yes, for a year and Yes, once both answer without giving a date, which is what keeps the conversation in this tense.

3G · Check — six items, mark your own 1 Have ... worked · 2 never · 3 haven't done · 4 has done · 5 I worked there last year. — a date forces the past simple · 6 Have you ever been to Jasper? — the participle is been, not went

5C · Answer 1 YEARS OF EXPERIENCE.

3 He ran the kitchen alone for eleven weeks.

4 Four.

5 Because the number was going to be compared with twenty-three and there was nowhere on the form to put anything else.

6 Time spent near the job. It cannot distinguish between two people with the same number of years and it cannot distinguish between two people with different numbers either, because what it measures is not what the job needs.

5D · Vocabulary in context without notice — leaving suddenly, with no warning · talked somebody out of — persuaded them not to · nowhere to put it — no space on the form · how long you have been near it — proximity over time, not ability · more than once — on several occasions

5E · The counter-text 1 Eleven.

2 Nine about dates or documents; one about what somebody can do, and that one asks for a number of years.

3 Four lines.

4 "Information provided here will be read but does not form part of the score." It turns the only open box on the form into a courtesy, and anybody who has filled in a form before knows what that means.

5F · Two texts In the OTHER box, which is four lines long and explicitly unscored — so the single most useful fact about the candidate would be recorded in the one place the form has declared worthless.

6C · Chunk 1 Have · 2 never · 3 yet · 4 already · 5 Not yet · 6 Only once

12A · Recycle — twelve items 1 Have ... worked · 2 never · 3 yet · 4 already · 5 gone · 6 been · 7 Not yet · 8 Only once · 9 take up · 10 carry on · 11 mustn't · 12 probably

A1.2 · Unit 9 · Forty Below

0B · Guess it The one with no coat. Nobody stands outside at minus thirty-eight without a coat on purpose; they came out for something that was going to take forty seconds, and the forty seconds became nine minutes because nobody else knows how long this will take either.

1C · Sort — the weather, or what it does to you?

BOTH — wet · ice SOMETHING YOU FEEL — degrees · cool · dry SOMETHING IN THE SKY — sky · cloud · snow · storm · wind The two in both: ice and wet. Ice falls out of the sky and forms on a rail; wet describes the weather and the state of your coat. Both are conditions outside you and sensations on you, and English uses one word for each pair.

2A · On the platform 🎧 Track 9.1 1 F · 2 T · 3 F · 4 T Listen once — minus forty-four.

Table — tonight: leave at 23.00, changed to not at all. Tomorrow morning: nothing planned, changed to leaving at six. The weekend: unchanged, and it depends on the weather.

1 is false: they are putting it off, not cancelling it. 3 is false: she says not yet.

Noticing — in 1 the evidence is in front of him: the sky and the forecast. In 4 the decision was made this morning. Both take going to and the reason is different: evidence in one, a decision already made in the other.

3D · Use — controlled 1 is going to snow · 2 are leaving · 3 am going to check · 4 'll get · 5 are ... doing 3E · Use — guided 1 It's going to rain — evidence in front of you.

2 We're meeting on Friday — arranged with other people.

3 I'll take that for you — decided as you speak.

4 I'm going to take a course in the spring — decided last week.

5 The train leaves at 06.10 — a timetable, so the present simple, which is the fourth future and the one this unit does not teach.

3G · Check — six items, mark your own 1 is going to · 2 are leaving · 3 am going to · 4 'll · 5 I'm going to check it again at four. — the decision was made this morning · 6 the first one — it's going to rain was a prediction and it is already raining, so the present continuous was needed: it's raining

5C · Answer 1 About four times in ten.

2 Two hours and forty minutes.

3 A crew member, at Winnipeg.

4 In 2011.

5 Because printing it would be an admission that the published times are not the real ones, and an admission is a thing a company can be held to.

6 Because twice means it was raised, considered and refused, and then raised again. It is the difference between an oversight and a decision.

5D · Vocabulary in context by an average of — the mean amount · lands on — falls to, as a burden · did not write it — was not responsible for it · worked out — calculated · an admission — an acknowledgement of something you would rather not say

5E · The counter-text 1 Minus thirty-eight.

2 A hundred and sixty minutes, and the printed timetable allows nought.

3 Eighty-one per cent.

4 "Not for passenger distribution." It protects the company from having published a figure it would then be held to — and it leaves the crew to say the figure out loud instead.

5F · Two texts The ticket is the timetable and the crew sheet is the forecast, and on nine mornings out of ten in January the forecast is the one that comes true.

A1.2 • Unit 10 • Four Thousand One Hundred Cards

0B • Guess it The one with no year on it, because nobody writes the year on a box that is still being filled. It is also the fullest, which means the cards have not stopped coming — they have only stopped being counted.

1C • Sort — the thing, or your opinion of it?

PART OF THE STORY — ending · memory · story BOTH — favourite · true WHAT YOU THINK OF IT — funny · boring · longest · interesting · amazing The two in both: true and favourite. Truth is a property of the story and a claim you are making about it; a favourite is a thing and a judgement at the same time. Longest looks factual and is almost always an opinion, which is worth arguing about.

2A • In the storeroom 📶 Track 10.1 1 F · 2 T · 3 F · 4 T Listen once — nine.

Table — complaints: expected most of them, actually 210. Stories: expected almost none, actually 1,100. Nothing at all: expected none, actually 990.

1 is false: 210 of 4,100. 3 is false: there is not.

Noticing — too means more than you want: too long to read. Not enough means less than you need: not enough time. They describe the same mismatch from opposite sides, and the thing that is wrong is different in each.

3D • Use — controlled 1 the strangest · 2 the best · 3 enough · 4 too · 5 the most interesting

3E • Use — guided Accept any sentence with a correct superlative and a reason using too or enough. 3 Two hundred and ten.

4 About four hundred.

5 Because every one of them arrived by another route as well — a letter, an email, a complaints process. The card was never the channel for a complaint; it only looked like one.

6 That it is selling time in a room with strangers. The seat and the journey are what is priced; what people write about afterwards is each other.

5D • Vocabulary in context four lines — the space provided · came back — were returned · by another route — through a different channel · by description — identified by what they looked like · for eleven years — throughout that period

5E • The counter-text 1 "The best thing about your journey?"

2 Four. The writer used all four, then the right margin, then the back.

3 2016.

4 That they were not writing to the company at all. Writing over the address makes the card unpostable, which means it was never meant to be sent — it was written because the writer wanted to write it down.

5F · Two texts Yes. The best thing about the journey was a person, and the question asked for the best thing about the journey — the company simply did not expect the answer to be another passenger.

6C · Chunk 1 enough · 2 enough · 3 too · 4 very · 5 the most amazing · 6 Almost
